EVANS SPAULDING

SAYS SON IS VAMPED BY PEGGY

Mrs. Spaulding Glad He Has Gone to Europe "to Escape Snake"

For the first time in forty-eight hours Mrs. Mary Evans Spaulding is breathing easily.

Her good-looking young captain - of - marines son, Evans Spaulding, Harvard '15, is, temporarily at least, out of the toils of "that boa-constrictor."

That "boa-constrictor" is none other than Peggy Hopkins Joyce, thrice-divorced star of the stage, whose sudden visit to Boston the other day nearly brought collapse to Mrs. Spaulding.

"I hope that terrible-tempered, wilful woman doesn't pursue my boy to London," Mrs. Spaulding said today, at her home in Manchester-by-the-Sea, to a Boston American reporter.

INVITED HERSELF.

"Her visit to Boston was entirely of her own volition. She was not invited by me or by my son. She invited herself to our suite at the Copley-Plaza.

"The first we knew of it was when the telephone rang and Evans answered. I nearly had heart failure when I heard him say 'Oh, hello, Peggy. Yes, sure, come right up.'

"I thought I had seen the last of her in New York some years back, when she had my son in her toils, and when her husband, Mr. Joyce, was having me shadowed in an effort to drag me and my boy into the disgraceful divorce proceedings.

"I asked Evans what on earth he meant by inviting her to our suite. He said, 'Well, mother, it's too bad and all that, but you know what Peggy is. If we don't ask her up

SAYS THAW NEEDS A CHANGE OF AIR

Philadelphia, Feb. 10.—Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, who is in the Pennsylvania Hospital for Mental and Nervous Diseases in West Philadelphia, will visit his mother in Pittsburgh next week, if a court order is granted permitting him to leave the institution.

Thaw, former Judge James Gay Gordon, counsel for the family says, needs a change of air and the trip is proposed partly for his health and to see his mother.

CHARGES COP TOOK IMPORTANT PAPERS

Corporation Counsel E. Mark Sullivan demands from Patrolman George H. McCaffrey certain records of food prosecutions in the Peters administration, which Sullivan claims were taken from City Hall by the patrolman, formerly attached to the city health department and now assigned to the office of District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien.

When transferred McCaffrey took the records home, it is said, but after the corporation counsel communicated with Police Commissioner Wilson some were returned to City Hall, but Mr. Sullivan wants the other papers returned.

HAROLD LLOYD GETS PERMIT TO WED

FAMINE CAUSES MANY COAL RAIDS

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 10 (By International News Service).—Wholesale raids on coal cars passing through the city have been a sequel to the continued coal shortage, William A. Bright, a New York Central railroad detective, told Justice Shove in Juvenile Court today, appealing for aid to stop the practice by imposing severe penalties upon those whom he had arrested.

CHARGES INSULT BY NEGRO DOCTOR

Charging that Dr. W. G. Taylor, colored, of No. 136 St. Botolph street, Back Bay, had kissed her and beat her when she refused his advances, Mrs. Elena Oneail, of No. 859 Massachusetts avenue, appeared in the Roxbury court today to ask for a warrant for his arrest.

At the request of Attorney John F. Feeney, counsel for Taylor, the hearing was put over until next Wednesday.

Dr. Taylor's home has been guarded by police since he received two K. K. K. notes warning him to leave the city.

Mrs. Oneail told the police today that she called Dr. Taylor last Wednesday about midnight when she was taken suddenly ill. She said he kissed her and then struck her when she repulsed him. She alleges that she bears thirteen black and blue bruises as a result of the beating.

BAN PLACED ON DEER ISLAND

Mysterious Contagious Disease Found on Prisoner Causes Quarantine

Deer Island was ordered quarantined today when it was discovered that one of the prisoners, Patrick J. Madigan of Brighton, was suffering from a mysterious contagious disease.

According to the prison authorities the malady may turn out to be typhus fever or dengue, a disease common to the tropics, where it is known as "break bone fever."

Madigan was taken to Deer Island after being sentenced in Brighton Court for wife desertion. He had been arrested in Galveston, Texas, by the police of that city and brought back here by boat.

He spent several days in Charles street jail and was transferred to the island Wednesday.

According to Madigan, scores of people have died recently in Galveston and vicinity from a similar disease.

His condition was suspected when he was examined on his arrival by Dr. McGaffigan, the Deer Island physician. He was isolated for several days on Long Island and as his condition gradually became worse the authorities became alarmed.

Today when Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, city health commissioner, learned of the case, he ordered a strict quarantine over the island and sent a number of doctors there to examine the patient.

Until they report that there is no danger of contagion no one will be allowed to leave or land on the island.

EDISON, 77 SUNDAY, EXPECTS WORK AT 100

West Orange, N. J., Feb. 10.—Thomas A. Edison, who will celebrate his seventy-seventh birthday tomorrow, said today he expects to work until he is 100 years old.

"Judging by my ancestors," he said, "I am really only a middle-aged man now. Judging by my feelings it comes to about the same thing. My great-grandfather lived to be 104 and my grandfather to be 102, while my father was 94 when he died. I don't expect to lower the average."

BROOKLINE TROLLEYS WRECKED

Four Victims of Twenty Hurt in Crash Are Rushed to Hospital

More than a score of persons were injured, four seriously, when two semi-convertible cars of the Boston Elevated crashed head on at Brookline avenue and Washington street, Brookline, this afternoon.

Both were Huntington avenue-Cypress street line cars. The crash was heard blocks away as they ran together.

The front of each was smashed to splinters. The passengers of both were thrown to the floor and against the car sides.

Several were cut by breaking glass. The motormen of both cars were seriously hurt.

Two passengers, one a middle-aged and the other a young woman were also among the more seriously injured. The motormen and women, bleeding profusely from wounds, were rushed to Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

Other passengers, most of them women, were carried into nearby stores and homes and treated by doctors hurriedly summoned.

No information could be obtained from the hospital as to the extent of the injuries of the four taken there.

PHELAN ALLOWS COAL DEALERS TO FIX OWN "FAIR" PRICES

HAS LEGAL R'GHT TO CURB PROFITEERING

S'ate Fuel Administrator James J. Phelan has authority, under the law, to fix coal prices in Massachusetts. He has enjoyed that power all winter, but has never taken advantage of it.

He has the statutory right to establish minimum and maximum rates. He is even vested with authority to seize fuel and sell it to the people, if emergency warranted.

This great authority was bestowed on the Governor through the General Statutes of 1917, Chapter 849, Section 6 and the Governor, as he had the right to do, passed the power on to Mr. Phelan when he appointed him emergency fuel administrator.

The statute reads:

"Whenever the Governor shall believe it necessary or expedient for the purpose of better securing the public safety . . . or welfare of the Commonwealth, he may with the approval of the Council take possession . . . . of any fuel . . . . which may be necessary or convenient . . . . for the better protection or welfare of the Commonwealth or its inhabitants. He may . . . . when in his opinion the public exigency so requires . . . . fix minimum and maximum prices therefor."

LET DEALERS DECIDE.

Mr. Phelan was not at his office or at home when a reporter for the Boston American sought him to ask what he had ever done about fixing coal prices. Mr. Robbins, his assistant, said the fuel administrator had no fixed standard price for coal. He said dealers had sent in what they the dealers had considered the fair price for their respective communities and that these were approved after investigation. He said the general retail price for coal in Boston was at present $16 a ton.

MINE PRICE $8.

The general sales manager for the Boston American that his company in Scranton was selling coal to dealers there at the rate of $8.50 a ton on the cars at the mines. His said buckwheat coal was selling on cars at the mines for $4.15 to New England dealers.

General Superintendent Bunning of the Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal Company, Wilkesbarre, Pa., said that their coal was sold on the cars at the mines to Massachusetts dealers for $8 a ton.

Hundreds of "Empties" Congest B. & M.

Hundreds of empty cars are held up idle on the Boston & Maine Railroad from Worcester and Northampton to the White Mountains because the New Haven Railroad cannot take its own cars back, and because the New York Central demands that its cars be routed back via the point at which they were delivered.

This situation adds to the congestion which is blocking the shipments of coal by way of the Boston & Maine to New England.

BLAMES N. Y. C.

"Recently the New York Central passed a rule that its cars coming to us must be returned through the same junction point as received. Formerly we could load up the empty cars and send them back to the New York Central through the route where cars were most needed.

"Likewise, the New Haven road is unable, many times, to take its cars back when we are ready to return them.

"As a result of these two items we have empty cars strung along from Worcester and Northampton up to the White Mountains."

A "rental" of $1 a day is charged by all roads for the use of their cars in foreign roads, it was explained. Thus a New York Central car on the Boston & Maine would be paid for while the latter road was in possession of the car and vice versa.

HARLEM RIVER BLOCKED.

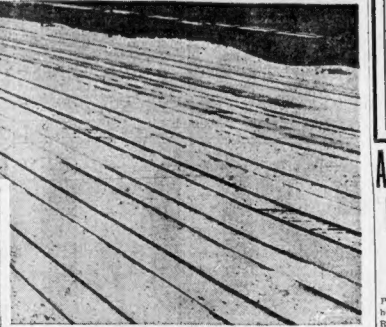
In 1921 the net balance of the "per diem rentals" system in operation on all railroads in the country went against the New England roads by several millions of dollars. On the Boston & Maine alone the "rentals" amounted to $2,192,812.

The fact that New England is a "consuming" and not a "producing" section is given as one reason for the cash loss involved in the interchange of cars.

Complaints have been received by the Transportation Department of the Boston Chamber of Commerce that hundreds of empty cars are now in Illinois at Harlem River.

Consignees and shippers alike have appealed to the Chamber to secure some action from the New Haven road to get some of these cars for New England shipments without avail.

AND THEN THE B. & M. WOKE UP



AFTER—BEHOLD THE SAME SECTION OF THE MECHANICSville yard after the Boston & Maine officials cancelled speaking engagements and buckled down to the real work of serving the public, following the Boston American expose of the coal car congestion on the road. Hitherto they had been too busy compiling "statistics" showing more cars handled in January than the year previous, etc., etc., and suavely accusing this newspaper of misrepresentation. Now look at the tracks which convict the officials by their emptiness.

BEFORE—HERE IS A SECTION OF THE MECHANICSVILLE YARD of the Boston and Maine Railroad before the Boston American began its exposes of the coal scandal of New England. For weeks the tracks of the yard were never clear of cars of coal, while the road prepared statistics for State Fuel Administrator Phelan, which satisfied Mr. Phelan that the road was doing its bit, but were no consolation for New England householders left with empty coal bins. Then came the Boston American's news and photographic proof that the Boston and Maine was literally "asleep at the switch." Whereupon the impossible, as seen in the upper photo, was achieved.

JUDGE DOUBTS COAL PRIORITY LEGALITY

Cincinnati, Feb. 10.—The constitutionality of the law from which the Interstate Commerce Commission derives its power to issue priority orders during an emergency was questioned today by Federal Judge John Weld Peck of United States District Court here.

Judge Peck said that inasmuch as no decision had ever been rendered as to the constitutionality of the law, he entertained doubts whether the Interstate Commerce Commission could say who may and why may not have coal or what sections of the country may or may not have coal during a coal strike.

The questioning of its constitutionality came as the judge was about to sentence Edward P. Avent Jr., a partner in the Bewley-Darst Coal Company of Cincinnati, who had pleaded guilty to five counts of an indictment charging him with violating priority orders in shipping coal to non-essential industries during the coal strike last Summer. Judge Peck inquired of Frank E. Wood, counsel for Avent, whether any decisions of the constitutionality of the law had been handed down, and when he answered in the negative the judge said he would take the case under advisement for several days until he had investigated the matter.

$15,000,000 COAL FIRM FOUNDED BY FORD

Detroit, Feb. 10.—The incorporation of the Fordson Coal Company, announced at Dover, Del., today, was a step by the Ford Motor Company to centralize its coal properties in a single unit, officials of the motor company were quoted as saying here.

The new corporation, with a capitalization of $15,000,000, is to operate coal properties purchased by Henry Ford in Kentucky and West Virginia. The organization of the coal company was finally perfected, it was said, Mr. Ford selling coal to the public.

SEIZE 50,000 BOTTLES OF ALE IN FISH CAR

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Feb. 10.—Two freight cars containing fifty thousand bottles of Canadian ale, diguised as a shipment of fish and consigned to a New York fish firm from Canada, were seized by Federal agents near Rossie's Point today, the prohibition enforcement office here announced. Six men were kept busy all day pouring out the liquid. The fish and bottles will be sold at public auction.

Marlboro En Fete to Greet 5 Carloads of Hard Coal

Marlboro, Feb. 10.—Practically the entire town turned out today to welcome five carloads of hard coal that arrived over the New Haven railroad. It seemed as though a circus had come to town. Women carried their babies in arms and there was general rejoicing.

"The Boston American is getting results," was heard on every side. Today's coal is the first considerable amount to arrive here in weeks.

COAL GOUGERS SOUGHT IN CAMBRIDGE

Inspectors of the Cambridge Bureau of Seals, Weights and Measures have been engaged the last week in obtaining samples of the stuff local dealers have been selling as coal.

Acting Mayor Barrett declared today the samples collected seemed to him to be 100 per cent. pigiron.

"Anybody that can burn the stuff the inspectors gathered is a wizard," he said. "Of course I am not an expert, and I am making sure of my ground by having an analysis made of the stuff. If the analysis shows what I expect it to show, we're going to get after the guilty dealers with an axe.

"I am going to instruct City Solicitor Peter J. Neligan to institute court proceedings ageing the coal gougers Monday morning if the findings of the chemists show that this stuff is not anthracite, a grade commensurate with the outrageous prices being charged for it."

Mr. Barrett expressed mild contempt for the attitude of the State fuel administration.

"I don't expect anything much from that source," he said. "They were too busy even to analyze the coal specimens our men gathered. I was forced to send the specimens for analysis to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. If the chemists find any coal in those specimens I'll be greatly surprised.

"I am going to do all I can to see that the expose of the American is not in vain, and that all the work put into the investigation by your newspaper will bear some fruit, at least here in Cambridge."

The investigation of the Cambridge dealers was conducted by Inspectors O'Neill and Healey of the Bureau of Seals, Weights and Measures. In addition to getting specimens of the alleged anthracite being palmed off on Cambridge householders, the inspectors secured considerable other information which will be part of the court proceedings that hinge upon the result of the chemical analysis.

Manufacturers Laud Phelan for Services

The executive committee of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts expresses thanks to James J. Phelan for his services to the State as fuel administrator.

The manufacturers passed resolutions at the committee meeting "to how our unqualified expression of our absolute confidence in the high character of the motives which have always actuated him in both his public and private capacity."

Here is the resolution:

"The recent unjust, unfair and dastardly attacks which have been directed against you by a certain Boston newspaper emphasize once again the reason for the reluctance of men of high character, ability and purpose to serve the public in emergencies such as the present, as frequently they would otherwise be glad to do."

CHARGE 2 COAL DEALERS WITH CHEATING POOR

Charges of cheating poor families by short weight in bag coal were made against two dealers today by City Sealer Charles P. Murray of Lynn.

The accused dealers are George Andrian of No. 495 Essex street, Lynn, who bags his own coal, and Louis Burnstein of No. 5 Cortland street, Everett, a distributor.

Sealer Murray secured summonses for appearance of Andrian and Burnstein in court February 14.

The Lynn sealer had received several hundred complaints the past ten days from poor families.

Murray went to Andrian's store and bought two bags of coal, selling as 25-pound weight each for 52 cents. When weighed on the sealer's scales one bag had only 21 pounds of coal, the other 23 pounds, it is charged.

Another violation, Murray says was that the Andrian coal bags were not marked with the name and address of Andrian as distributor.

Then Murray went to a store on Washington street where he weighed coal bagged by Louis Burnstein of No. 5 Cortland street, Everett. He says the bags were all under weight.

Burnstein set up an alibi that the coal he sold in bags was supplied to him by his brother Israel.

CALLS PEGGY A CONSTRICTOR

FLEW INTO TEMPER.

"I couldn't for the life of me understand the purpose of her visit. When she first met Evans in New York she was married to Joyce. I heard that my son was her escort in various dancing places along Broadway. Stories began to reach me.

"I made a special trip to New York. I suspected that she was interested in Evans largely because he was a good looking and because he could dance so well.

"When I got to New York I summoned Peggy. I asked her what she meant by going around with my son at a time when her divorce was the talk of the town. She told me frankly enough that she wasn't interested in Evans from a matrimonial viewpoint—he didn't have money enough.

"I asked her please to show more consideration for both of us, and she flew into a dreadful temper and frightened me out of my wits."

Mr. Joyce at the time was bending every energy to "get something" on Peggy. In some way, Mrs. Spaulding relates, he got the bunch that Mrs. Spaulding was young Spaulding's wife, instead of his mother.

SHADOWED FOR WEEKS.

"He had heard that Evans and the Hopkins girl were being seen together a great deal, and he had me shadowed for weeks. His sleuths followed me to Atlantic City and bothered me night and day until they found out that I was only Evans' mother."

During the war young Spaulding was a captain in the famous Sixth Regiment of Marines. He entered as a private on the day America entered the war, went over to France as a first lieutenant and came back a captain, with two citations for gallant conduct at Soissons and Belleau Wood.

While he was in New York he maintained bachelor apartments in East 59th street. Nightly he was a familiar figure in Broadway's jazz circles, and almost every night was accompanied by the beauteous Peggy. It began to be rumored that young Spaulding would have the honor of being the fourth husband of Peggy, but the wiseacres said it would never be, because Evans while coming from one of the best families in New England did not have the wealth of any of the first three husbands of Peggy.

'OLD FRIENDS" ONLY.

During his stay in New York young Spaulding was employed by the Holmes Electrical Appliance Company. Recently he obtained a position with the firm of Walker & Co. of Boston, through a member of the firm, Joseph Walker, who was his classmate in Harvard.

Evans sailed for London today. He is to represent Walker & Co. in that city. Before he got aboard the SS Indiania he denied he was to be the next husband of Peggy.

He admitted that he and Peggy were "old friends" and that Peggy had been his guest in Boston for two days.

SHOW A FLIVVER.

"She came to Boston especially to see me," the young man said, not without a trace of pride in his voice. "But there's nothing in that marriage talk. We've been friends for years —good friends, but nothing more."

Peggy is now in New York. Her trip there may have been made in connection with a play called "Mike Angelo," starring Leo Carrile, which,

Paste these facts in your hat for future reference:

By Jan. 1 coal dealers will be ASKING you to buy hard coal.

By Nov. 1 you will be able to buy hard coal a ton at a time.

By Dec. 15 you will be able to buy more at a time.

By Jan. 1 you will be able to buy all you can use.

But in the mean time you can cease worrying about freezing this winter.

You are not going to freeze.

CLIPPED FROM THE BOSTON Traveler of September 22, 1922, by way of a rejoinder to the indignant reproach of the Boston Herald and its little appendix, the Traveler, at the Boston American's expose of the New England coal scandal. This newspaper admits the charge of lese majeste in blaming the interests which these twins serve for the coal shortage, but denies any inaccuracies in its reports of the conditions responsible for the situation. Speaking of inaccuracies, does the reader recall his coal dealer asking him to buy coal on January 1 last?

DECLARES COAL SHORTAGE OVER

URGES PUBLIC TO KEEP UP ECONOMIES

"The coal shortage in Massachusetts is practically over, according to figures presented yesterday by James J. Phelan, emergency fuel administrator for the state. Except for one week, since mining was resumed, production of anthracite has shown a substantial increase over that for 1921, benefiting New England to the greatest extent in two years when on Tuesday the railroads reported handling 700 cars of hard coal for this state.

Mr. Phelan commends both public and dealers for commendable observance of CLIPPED FROM THE BOSTON Herald of January 20 last. That newspaper was indignant at the "inaccuracies" of the Boston American's report of the coal found in the bins of State Fuel Administrator Phelan. The reader will observe that Mr. Phelan says that there should be "no unnecessary suffering" because of coal shortage, the shortage being practically over.

it is said, Peggy "angeled" for Oliver Morosco, the producer.

It was reported last Fall that Peggy and Morosco had entered into a partnership which had for its ultimate purpose the construction of a special theatre to be known as the Peggy Joyce theatre.

"Mike Angelo" has fared very bad ly in New York, and after four or five anaemic weeks at the Morosco theatre is being closed February 13.

COHASSET MAN HELD IN FRIEND'S DEATH

Henry Whitcomb of Cohasset, short and slight, slew his life-long friend, Charles Litchfield of Cohasset, by hitting him on the head with a piece of marble in a hard cider fight, according to the charge against Whitcomb in Quincy Court today. He was held for Norfolk Grand Jury for murder. For more than sixty years Litchfield, who weighed more than 200 pounds, was a chum of the lightweight Whitcomb.

On January 16, it is charged, Litchfield went to Whitcomb's home, drank some cider and finally got into the fatal fight. Whitcomb made no plea.

ALLIES FORBID GERMAN VISITS TO RUHR

Paris, Feb. 10 (By the Associated Press).—German Cabinet ministers hereafter will be barred from the Ruhr by the Franco-Belgian forces, Premier Poincare of France and Foreign Minister Jaspar of Belgium, at a conference here today drafted a brief note to this effect which was immediately delivered to the German embassies in Paris and Brussels.

The note reads:

"The Belgian and French governments have established that the visit of Chancellor Cuno in the Ruhr region and the action he took here had for its sole object, and really resulted in, the provoking of a dangerous state of excitement, particularly among the big industrial leaders, chief functionaries and government employes.

"Under these conditions the French and Belgian governments are anxious to avoid, especially in the interest of the population, disorders that might become sanguinary, find it necessary to inform the government of the Reich and the governments of the States that Ministers of the Reich and of the German States will no longer be authorized to enter the Ruhr."

The German charge d'affaires in Paris handed the Foreign Office today a note from his government protesting against the French note declaring the French government would receive no more protests against action by the forces of occupation in the Ruhr Valley.

"The French government," says the German note, "thereby raises the pretension that all it has done and all it intends to do, according to its own good pleasure, ought to be accepted in silence by the German government."

Germans Disarm French Soldiers; One Stabbed

Essen, Feb. 10. (By International News Service).—Trouble is brewing at Bochum, following an attack by a German mob upon two French soldiers last night. One of the Frenchmen was stabbed several times. Germans claim the pair were disarmed after they had threatened to shoot into a crowd of Germans.

Two German clergymen, Rev. Bacharach and Rev. Simmern of Coblenz, were fined 10,000 and 20,000 marks, respectively, on the charge that they "disturbed the peace and slandered French troops."

WILL ASK U. S. TO HELP CURB ARMS OUTPUT

ALLIES FORBID HOTHEAD TURKS CLAMOR FOR MORE WAR

Rome, Feb. 10 (By International News Service).—A report was received here today that the Turks had seized allied steamships at Zongeldak.

London, Feb. 10.—A dispatch from Constantinople says the Turks were laying mines in the entrance to Smyrna harbor.

Constantinople, Feb. 10 (By International News Service).—Turkish extremists who are clamoring for war against the allied powers were reported today to be gaining strength at Angora, the Turkish capital.

They were angered by reports from Smyrna that the Turkish commander had reached an agreement with the allied commanders to allow foreign warships to remain in the harbor until a final diplomatic settlement is made.

Moderates in the Turkish Nationalist Assembly at Angora pointed out to the hotheads that it would be national suicide for Turkey to go to war, because she would have to fight not only Great Britain and Greece but the United States as well.

Ismet Pasha, head of the Turkish delegation at Lausanne, was scheduled to confer with the Allied High Commissioners today or tomorrow, and reach Angora Tuesday to consult the Kemalist Cabinet. It is anticipated negotiations over the Turkish demand for withdrawal of foreign warships from Smyrna will be opened immediately after his arrival in Angora.

The Allies will contend there was no reason for the order and that it was a breach of international courtesy. The Turks will maintain the order was a test of Turkish sovereignty and that they are entitled to "regulate maritime matters in their own harbors."

INVITE STRIKERS TO RAILROAD PARLEY

The second conference in the investigation of railroad service ordered by the Legislature will be held Thursday forenoon by the State Department of Public Utilities. Representatives of the striking shopmen have been invited. They when have been blamed by the railroad officials for all the ills of the railroads. The men declare they were ready to negotiate their dispute from the start, but that in all the months of the strike the railroad officials have refused to meet them at the conference table.

SPECIAL BOARD TO STUDY CAR SHORTAGE

The Bargaining Turks
Unpleasant News
The Wheel vs. 4 Legs
The Sheik and the Plague

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

A SITUATION more dangerous than usual prevailed for a while in Europe yesterday. The bargaining Turks persisted in their order expelling Allied warships from Smyrna harbor. England, sending more ships, was ready to accept the Turkish challenge, and the first gun in the newest war might have been fired there.

However, our Turkish brothers are wiser than in days when the Sultan actually believed himself the ruler of the earth and only genuine representative of God here below. Modern Turks will find a way to back down and save their faces.

MISS MILDRED ERICK of Chicago, church organist, twenty-four years old, tells the police that she was kidnaped by hooded men, stripped of her clothing and branded with ten crosses cut upon her body.

We are not exactly civilized yet.

THE ROLLING WHEEL, first on ox carts, then on locomotives and automobiles, was a great improvement on the four legs of the deer and horse. The highest transportation is spherical. You travel on a round ball, the earth, surrounded in space by other traveling spheres.

But nature knew that four legs were needed at first, with the ground rough everywhere, no smooth road, no place for a wheel to roll.

A German, going back to the early plan, builds a motor truck that runs on four iron feet, carrying eight tons slowly over the roughest lands, where no wheel could travel. A sort of mammoth run on gasoline.

DR. FRANKLIN FISKE, commenting on Mons. Coue's departure, says: "Most of his teaching is included in the story of the Sheik and the plague."

"Sheik, I must take ten thousand of your men," said the plague.

Later the Sheik complained. "You said you would take ten thousand men and you took thirty thousand."

"No," said the plague, "I took only ten thousand. Fear took the other twenty thousand."

THE WAR AND "FLU" cost thirty million lives. A cheap price if this news item is verified.

Flying machines, scattering poison gas just above the marshes, could destroy larvae and adult mosquitoes. That would end the carriers of malaria and yellow fever, saving hundreds of millions of lives in the long run.

National government, through the Agricultural and War Departments, should experiment with the new mosquito killer.

SOMETHING NEW in censorship comes from Colorado's House of Representatives. The chaplain, J. R. Kader, began his opening prayer, "O Lord, how long is this condition to endure?"

He then told the Lord, "Our courts are corrupt. God has been expelled from our churches. Our pulpits are filled with easyists. Our boys and girls are going to the dogs. Laboring men go to work with empty pails, farmers starve, middlemen wax fat, banks are bursting with money."

IMMEDIATELY the representatives adopted a resolution censoring that prayer. Something you never heard of before. Is not a prayer addressed to the Almighty privileged? The chaplain's criticisms were addressed to the Lord. Surely He could judge their accuracy.

THE FRANC'S LATEST drop convinces English financial writers that Frenchmen are investing money outside of France. Such writers know little about the French character. To a real Frenchman France is 95¾ per cent. of the civilized world. No value is real except French value. He would as soon think of transferring his wealth to Mars as send it to England or America.

ST. LOUIS is considering a bond issue of $38,372,500. Doubtless the money, if the citizens vote it, will be well used. The issue would be eagerly welcomed by the tax dodgers, who bury their accumulated fortunes in such securities and pay not a cent in income tax.

MYSTERY IN TROTH OF REGGIE V.

GLORIA MORGAN

How do you explain this: Gloria Morgan is flashing an 11-carat diamond engagement ring; her father has cabled his consent to her marrying Reggie Vanderbilt and also his blessings; and now Reggie's secretary issues a statement denying the engagement. A mystery. What?

New York, Feb. 10.—Miss Gloria Morgan, daughter of Harry Hays Morgan, American Consul-General at Brussels, flashes an eleven-carat emerald on her engagement finger.

Mr. Moran cabled confirmation and blessings.

And then—

Reggie himself, through his secretary, issued a statement denyin the story, issued a statement denying the

And further mystery is added to the situation by a promise to make a further statement later.

PLUNGES 5 STORIES TO DEATH

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 10.—Mrs. Warner M. Leeds, fifty-five, sister-in-law of Princess Anastasia, either fell or leaped to her death from the fifth story window of her home at No. 10 East 65th street, today.

Before the eyes of scores of passers-by Mrs. Leeds plunged to the pavement, striking head first, and was killed instantly. She was the wife of Warren M. Leeds, whose brother, the late William B. Leeds, was known as "The Tin Plate King."

Princess Anastasia, who married Prince Christopher of Greece, was formerly Mrs. William B. Leeds.

Dr. Holden heard the cries of spectators and was first to reach her body. The medical examiner's office was notified by the police that Mrs. Leeds had committed suicide. This the family denies.

An investigation is being conducted.

PLUNGES TO HER DEATH.

Mrs. Leeds was missed from her room by Miss Eleanor Walker, her nurse. Hastening from the second floor room Miss Walker said she discovered Mrs. Leeds leaning from a window of a servant's room on the fifth floor.

"I spoke to her—called to her," Miss Walker related, "but before I could reach her she had plunged head foremost to the street."

Mrs. Leeds had recently returned from a sanitarium where she had gone for treatment for a nervous trouble.

Mrs. Leeds' husband and their adopted daughter, Joy, aged nine, were on the second floor when the tragedy occurred.

Mr. Leeds is said to have been an invalid for several years. He retired as an associate with his brother in the tin plate business fifteen years ago.

DOCTORS DENY SUICIDE.

Mrs. Leeds and her husband were happy and there were no difficulties to provide for self-willed death, they said. James Mott Hartshorne, Mrs. Leeds' brother, told newspaper men that reports of suicide were unfounded. Henry H. Abbott, family attorney, likewise made a statement that death was accidental.

MRS. RAAB NAMES LOUD

Charges "Frame-up" In Arrest on Charge of Cheating U. S. on War Risk

Mrs. Mary O'Leary Raab of Melrose declared today that Clarence W. Loud visited East Cambridge jail and inspected records there a short time before she was arrested on Federal charges of violation of the War Risk Insurance act.

Commissioner Hayes held the young woman in $1,000 for the Federal Grand Jury. Bail was furnished by her uncle, William H. Loring of Melrose Highlands.

She asserted emphatically that she never, as charged by the government, had received any money from the government as War Risk Insurance on two husbands.

"They certainly framed me this time, but in time I will come out on top and show the people of Melrose who is the real criminal in this city."

Mrs. Raab,

Mrs. Daniel O'Leary, mother of Mrs. Raab, said today she had asked Chief Kerr several times what he meant by saying in Malden Court that Mrs. Raab was violating a Federal war act. Every time she asked his question, she added, Chief Kerr replied:

"You will find that out soon enough."

Mrs. Raab recently accused Mrs. Kate Dow of Melrose and several others of assaulting her at a party in Mrs. Dow's home, because she "knew too much about the Preston murder."

Since the trial of the persons she accused of assault, the Navy Department has been investigating the career of Mrs. Raab. Samuel Raab, her second husband, has been quoted as declaring that he and his wife's first husband, Peter Spudick, were in the navy together and she was drawing $30 a month allotment from each. Raab also said that neither he nor Spudick had ever been divorced.

After an exciting trial, which consumed a week's time, the defendants accused by Mrs. Raab of assaulting her because she knew too much about the Preston murder were acquitted.

F. J. Gould Weds Third Divorcee

MRS. FRANK J. GOULD.
By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 10.—Frank J. Gould of New York and Miss Florence Lygaze of San Francisco were married today in the office of the Mayor of the Sixteenth Arrondissement of Paris.

This is the third marital venture of Gould, and the second for his pretty bride, Mlle. Lagaze.

Gould's first wife was Miss Margaret Kelley. Divorce separated them. His second wife was Miss Edith Kelley. Divorce ended that marriage. His third wife is also a divorcee.

She was formerly Mrs. Henry Chittenden Heynemann, wife of a prominent San Francisco architect. Divorce ended their marriage venture. All three of Gould's wives have been noted for their beauty.

IRISH TO FIGHT TO FINISH, SAYS LIAM LYNCH

By the Associated Press.

Dublin, Feb. 10.—Liam Lynch, Republican chief of staff, today issued a proclamation declaring that "the war will go on until the independence of our country is recognized by our enemies, foreign and domestic," and calling upon the army to "continue activities with vigor."

The proclamation reads as follows:

"Comrades—We have reached our supreme crisis in the struggle waged by us in defence of the Republic. Since June last the army has withstood all efforts to break it by force in the field and by vile propaganda. Today it is in a much stronger position than at any period in its history.

"Having thus failed by force to break the morale and spirit of the army, the enemy has resorted to intrigue and the employment of every base method to accomplish its ends. He seeks by breaking individual officers to undermine the discipline of the army.

"Realizing the enemy's past record in negotiations — bad faith, broken promises and deceit—you will not be deluded by his present wiles into surrendering the strong position you have so dearly won. The war will go on until the independence of our country is recognized by our enemies, foreign and domestic.

"There can be no compromise on his fundamental position. Victory is within our grasp if we stand united by and firmly."

ROENTGEN, OF X-RAY FAME, DIES

Discoverer of Light That Startled Medical World Succumbs in Munich

Berlin, Feb. 10. — Professor William Conrad Roentgen, discoverer of the Roentgen rays, popularly known as X-rays, is dead at Munich.

For his discovery he received the Rumfors medal of the Royal Society in 1896, jointly with Philip Lenard, who was honored because of his previous researches with cathodic rays.

Prof. Roentgen was born in Lennep, Prussia, March 27, 1845. He received his early education in Holland and then studied at Zurich, Switzerland, where he took his doctor's degree in 1865. After service as professor of physics at various German universities he went, in 1885, to Wurzburg, where, in 1895, he made the discovery for which his name was chiefly known.

It was while experimenting with a highly exhausted vacuum tube on the conduction of electricity through gases that he first produced the rays, which, because of their great penetration and their power of passing through various substances which are opaque to ordinary light, have become of the greatest value in science, especially to the medical profession.

RECOVER 36 BODIES IN MINE DISASTER

(By the Associated Press.)

Dawson, N. M., Feb. 10.—The stretcher borne cargo of burned and mutilated victims of Thursday's afternoon's explosion still trickled from the exploded mine of the Phelps-Dodge Corporation, today.

At daybreak thirty-six bodies had been removed from the mouth of the abaft as far back as the rescuing crews had penetrated. Two men walked out of the mine unharmed and eighty-four were believed to be in the mine.

The arrival today of two United States Bureau of Mines rescue cars was awaited eagerly by the workweary forces who have been combing ways.

SEIZE 25-GAL. STILL IN DORCHESTER

Sergeant John F. Lordan and Patrolman MacNealy seized a twenty-five-gallon still and fifty gallons of moonshine on the second floor of a dwelling house at No. 176 Minot street, Dorchester, and said to be occupied by Ignatz Sawalski.

The still was in operation at the time the police entered, it is said. Sawatski was arrested.

HAVERHILL SLAYER GETS LIFE TERM

Antonio Stematopolus, Haverhill, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Quinn in Superior Court, Salem, today, for the second degree murder of Charles Dantes by shooting, at Haverhill, Aug. 8, 1922. Motion for a new trial was overruled by Judge Quinn, who then imposed sentence.

FIRE HOUSE AND ENGINE BURNED

Gardiner Me., Feb. 10.—This city's only fire steamer, purchased twenty-five years ago, a reel and 500 feet of hose were destroyed today by a fire which burned the building known as the Cobbossee fire house. The firemen have left an automobile fire pump. The loss was estimated at $5000.

FAIR WEATHER FOLLOWS SNOW

The Weather Bureau promises fair weather for tonight and Sunday following today's snowfall. The temperature will be slightly lower.

ATTORNEY ACCUSED OF DECEIT

Charged That He Kept Cash That Belonged to Woman and Others

New York, Feb. 10.—Harry S. Steinfeld, attorney of record for Lou Tellegen in the Tellegen-Farrar divorce suit, was disbarred from the practice of law by the appellate division.

Charges of deceit and conversion preferred by the Bar Association were responsible for the action.

Among the charges made it was said that Steinfeld, while acting for Madame Juliette Nicole, a modiste, collected $920 from two customers and retained the money.

It was also charged that in 1913 Steinfeld retained the law firm of Morris, Walker and Allen of Pittsburgh to represent his clients in Pennsylvania, agreeing to an equal division of fees. He collected the fees, but appropriated the entire amount, it is charged.

Steinfeld was admitted to the bar in Brooklyn in 1910. He had acted as attorney for many prominent stage people, including the late Anna Held.

SEIZE WHISKEY ON BRITISH SHIP IN N. Y.

New York, Feb. 10.—Customs officers raided the British steamer Parima in Brooklyn today and confiscated 500 bottles of Scotch whiskey concealed in coal bunkers. A further search was ordered in the belief that 150 cases more would be found in obscure parts of the ship. The Parima arrived Thursday from the West Indies.

The schooner Minnehaha with fifty cases of whiskey aboard was captured by police off Coney Island Creek. The vessel mistook a police boat for a friendly bootlegging craft.

BRIDE VANISHES ON HONEYMOON

New York, Feb. 10.—James F. M. McGregor, a stock salesman of Great Falls, Montana, today continued search for his bride of five months, who is missing on their deferred honeymoon here. Mrs. McGregor parted from her husband in Times square Tuesday to telephone friends, agreeing to meet him later at a hotel. McGregor sat in the lobby until midnight, but she did not appear. The McGregor separation is the third case recently in which husbands and wives have been lost in the swirl of New York.

FEAR HUNDREDS DEAD IN STORM

Lisbon, Feb. 10 (By International News Service).—Terrific gales raged off the Portuguese coast today and the beaches were strewn with wreckage. Seven deaths were reported. It is feared hundreds of lives were lost.

Hundreds of fishing boats were reported missing with their crew. The storm swept nearly the whole western coast. Considerable damage was done on land by high wind.

OIL COMPANY RAISES PAY, AVERTS STRIKE

Bayonne, N. J., Feb. 10.—Wage adjustments, bringing employes pay to the scale paid by other oil companies here, was announced today by the Vacuum Oil Company. Employes had asked for a 12 per cent. increase. Company officials say the men are satisfied with the present wage adjustment and the danger of a strike is past.

Stranded Ship Is Floated

The British steamship City of Canton, out of Boston, with a crew of 75 men, which ran aground five miles southeast of Great Round Shoals, just south of the tip of Cape Cod, was floated today.

The vessel went aground in a heavy northeast storm and S. O. S. calls were broadcasted by radio. The revenue cutter Acushnet responded.

'TARZAN,' GIRL ADDICT, WILL TAKE CURE

Evelyn Wendturiet, also known as Evelyn Stanfield, and, to the police as "Tarzan," was given a three months' suspended sentence by Judge Hayden in Roxbury Court today on a statutory charge.

She was taken to Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, where an effort will be made to cure her of the drug habit.

When first arraigned in court the girl created a scene by screaming at the Judge and calling for "my Sammy, I want my Sammy."

FIFTH GIRL BORN TO COUNTESS SZECHENYI

Washington, Feb. 10. — The stork has again visited Countess Szechenyi, the former Gladys Vanderbilt and wife of the Hungarian minister here. The birth of a baby girl has been announced. This makes the Countess the mother of five children, all girls.

CANCEL INSURANCE IN HOODED MOB SECTION

Bastrop, La., Feb. 10.—Insurance companies are becoming alarmed over the hooded mob outrages in Morehouse Parish as revealed at the recent open hearing probing the deaths of Thomas F. Richards and Walt Dumlo. Several policyholders today received letters annulling their policies. Others received requests for compromise agreements.

SEES NEW HOPE FOR HARDING SHIP SUBSIDY

Washington, Feb. 10.—Another effort to smooth the troubled course of the administration ship bill in the Senate was made today at a White House conference attended by some Senators who are opposed to the bill in its present form, but who presented drafts of amendments designed to lead to a compromise insuring passage.

Senator McNary, Republican, of Oregon, is said to have informed the President enough votes could be obtained if his amendments were accepted.

After his return to the Capitol Senator McNary said he had real hopes that some of the more important if not all of his proposed amendments would be adopted.

The most important would limit subsidy payments to freight carriers and deny them to passenger vessels. Chairman Lasker is disposed to oppose this, but it was indicated today he might eventually accept it. Other McNary amendments would limit subsidy payments to a ten-year period, would restrict the power of the shipping board to establish lines and designate their ports, and would give ship operators the right to appeal to the Federal courts from decisions of the board.

MOTOR NEWS AND NOTES

—C. F. DONNOCKER—

C. B. VOORHIS RETIRES FROM AUTO INDUSTRY

It became known by way of a joint announcement by President C. W. Nash and C. B. Voorhis that the latter had resigned as vice-president and director of sales and retired from active service as an official of the Nash Motor Company.

Though this comes as a surprise to the industry in general, it was looked for by intimate friends, who have been aware for some time that Mr. Voorhis' personal affairs were demanding more and more of his attention.

TO RETAIN INTEREST.

He will continue to be substantially interested in the Nash Motors Company and also in a number of the distributing organizations, though the major share of his activities will be engaged by interests outside the industry.

Pursuant to Mr. Voorhis' decision a year ago that he must relinquish his official connection with Nash Motors to direct his private affairs, Earl H. McCarty was brought into the organization as sales manager.

Mr. Voorhis has been in charge of sales for Nash since the time of its organization, having been one of the first executives selected by Mr. Nash at the time of the acquisition of the old Jeffrey plant.

However, this connection with Mr. Nash dated back to General Motor days, when as general sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car Company his work had impressed Mr. Nash, at that time head of General Motors.

AIDED RAPID GROWTH.

Nash Motors has shown the most rapid growth of any company in the industry during the past six years, and the work of Mr. Voorhis in helping frame policies and in carrying out the sales program is given substantial credit for its share in making this phenomenal record possible.

Both on the part of Mr. Voorhis and his old associates in the organization there is deep and sincere regret that he should find it imperative to give up a connection that has meant so much in the way of warm friendship and that has earned for him so high a place in the industry.

"It is with a genuine sense of loss that we are forced to announce the retirement of Mr. Voorhis," said Mr. Nash. "His record while at Oakland and in my administration at General Motors, and later during the years that have elapsed since I founded the Nash Motor Company proves that he must be ranked among the country's most successful sales executives. Although this step removes him from active effort with us, nevertheless, his retention of residence in Kenosha and his financial interests both in this company and in a number of the distributing organizations will keep him in the Nash family and make his counsel available.

TAKE PRIDE IN SUCCESS.

"We here at the factory take pride in his success both as regards the work he has accomplished for the Nash Motors Company and in his personal business ventures.

"Earl H. McCarty, who joined us a year ago, has made good in a splendid manner and we are confident that he is a worthy successor to Mr. Voorhis. Under his direction of sales we look forward to another five-year period that will be comparable in every respect to the great record of the past five years."

In speaking of his retirement, Mr. Voorhis said that the step was taken only after long deliberation and with the greatest reluctance.

ASSOCIATIONS HAPPY.

"My long connection with Mr. Nash," said Mr. Voorhis, "and my service with the Nash Motors Company since its inception made it most difficult for me to reach a decision from which really there was no appeal if I were to do justice to my outside interests. My close association with Mr. Nash and other officials of the organization has been of a very happy nature and I am glad that while no longer an official I will still maintain contact through my interests in several of the distributing organizations.

"I know I am leaving the sales department in the most competent hands and my successor, Mr. McCarty, will, I am sure, build a wonderful success for himself and make a record for the Nash Motors Company.

"I think the automobile industry is entering upon the greatest period of its history with every evidence that the country in general has again reached a solid, stable, prosperous basis."

MILITARY FUNERAL FOR SALEM EX-MAYOR

The funeral of ex-Mayor David Mason Linn will be held at the North Church, Salem, this afternoon, with civic and military honors. A Unitarian service will be conducted by the Rev. Theodore Bacon, and the Masonic ritual by Horace Hewitt. The honorary pallbearers: Arthur Little, Judge Hamlet G. Bennett, Henry Wheeler, Boston; Philip Little, Henry M. Batchelder, Josiah H. Clifford, Henry G. Hall, Walter H. Trumbull, William Northery, Rev. A. W. Manchester, Rev. Howard R. Weir, Arthur W. West, Henry W. Belknap, Salem; Ernest B. Adams, Providence; James P. Parker, Naval Reserve, and Frank A. Stoll, representing the Masons.

BIG AUTO SHOW IN BOSTON TO OPEN MARCH 10

Four weeks more and the doors of the twenty-first annual Boston Automobile Show will be thrown open, the main show being in Mechanics Building from March 10 to 17, and the Salon in the ballroom of the Copley-Plaza Hotel, March 12 to 16.

Every arrangement for this annual event is now completed. All the exhibition spaces have been taken, and quite a number of manufacturers and dealers are still hoping for something to happen to let them in.

NEW DECORATION SCHEME.

All that remains to be done is for the exhibitors to get their displays in place, which will be possible as soon as the great building is cleared. The decorations will be the last thing and a staff of artists is already at work under the direction of Manager Chester I. Campbell gotting together the material and special art pieces.

As usual the decorative scheme will not be announced until the last minute, but it is said that it will excel that of last year.

Weather conditions being favorable, it is safe to expect that 40,000 persons will attend on the opening day, Saturday, March 10. That figure was reached last year and preparations are being made for the same crowd this time.

STYLE AND EFFICIENCY.

Two things will stand out this year above all other features of the show—style and efficiency. For the first the prospective buyer will be attracted on every side by the various models, especially those of the enclosed cars, because of the more pleasing appearance of body designs and the greater completeness of fittings and general appointments intended to give the driver and passengers more comfort.

The second item, and the most important of all, will be the motor and the general improvements in chassis construction.

EVERY FAMILY SHOULD HAVE 'HANDY BAG'

Every family in New England should have at least one Handy Bag.

Every family in New England CAN have one, if they desire. For those who are unable to come into the Boston American, first floor, may have the bag sent to them anywhere in the United States or Canada by simply adding 5 cents to the original cost, making 33 cents in all.

The bag is fashioned of beautiful black leatherette of long grain, and the 33 cents is only a small part of its real cost. The 5 cents extra, if sent by mail, is for postage and wrapping.

The bag looks smart enough for the most fastidious woman to carry, and yet it can be folded up and carried in a man's overcoat or hip pocket without embarrassment to him. Extended, the bag doesn't look much different from the ordinary shopping bag. It is waterproof and stands up under the severest of weather.

All you have to do to own one of these bags of "a hundred uses" is to clip from the Boston American on three separate days, or consecutively, the Handy Bag Coupon and bring them with you to the first floor of the Boston American and get your bag. Address Handy Bag Department, Boston American, if you want to have the bag sent by mail.

Start clipping the coupons NOW. Bags may be obtained on and after next Monday.

"HANDY BAGS" JUST FIT HIP POCKETS

RADIO INDUSTRY ASKS REGULATION

New York, Feb. 10.—Federal regulation and limiting of radio broadcasting stations was reported as the demand of both listener and manufacturer by the National Radio Chamber of Commerce. Ralph C. Watrous was chairman of a special committee which conducted a countrywide questionnaire.

MRS. J. PULITZER LOSES $6,000 GEMS

Paris, Feb. 10.—Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, who is stopping at a hotel on the Champs Elysees, was robbed of gems worth $6,000, which she had left in a room in the establishment. The victim of the robbery is the wife of the publisher of the New York World.

INTERFERENCE CUT DOWN BY SHARP TUNER

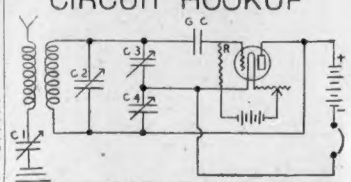
In this circuit regeneration is obtained by means of condensers instead of by inductances, and the receiver is more selective and permits sharper tuning than by the usual method.

The two variable condensers, which have a capacity of .001 mfd. (C3 and C4) are connected in series across the grid and plate of the tube. A connection is made from the centre point between these two condensers to the filament.

These condensers may be mounted on the same shaft, and so adjusted that the rotation of the shaft will increase the capacity of one and decrease the capacity of the other. The resultant, or total, capacity of the two condensers will thus remain practically constant.

This will change the regeneration, but will cause very slight variation in tuning. Some of the finest government radio receivers are of the capacity-coupled type.

CAPACITY COUPLED CIRCUIT HOOKUP



REGENERATES BY CONDENSERS

A capacity coupled receiver by which especially sharp tuning is possible. C1 is a variable condenser for tuning the primary, and need be only a small one if the primary coil is tapped. The other condensers (C2, C3 and C4) are of .001 mfd., maximum capacity. GC is the grid condenser. R is the grid leak.

COAST TO COAST ROUND TRIP ON ORIGINAL TIRES

"When a motorist has traveled over the rugged mountain roads in going from Chicago to the Pacific Coast, he is satisfied, even if he has used up a complete set of tires, but it is some accomplishment to make the round trip on a single set and finish 8,591 miles on the original four Royal Cord Tires on the wheels," says an official of the United States Tire Co.

"The car followed for the most part the Yellowstone Trail to Seattle, the Pacific Highway to Los Angeles and the Santa Fe Trail and Lincoln Highway back to Chicago. Included in the journey were many side trips, one being up the Pike's Peak Highway.

"In the 8,591 miles Mr. Vanderwarf's tires suffered only a half dozen punctures, not a single blowout. Each puncture was caused by either a rock or nail. It is notable that the car travelled all the way to Spokane before encountering the first puncture."

JANUARY CONSTRUCTION LEADS LAST YEAR

January construction activity was thirty-one per cent. greater than in the corresponding month of last year, according to the F. W. Dodge Company. The total contracts awarded during the past month in the thirty-six Eastern States of the country (including about seven-eighths of the total construction volume) amounted to $242,755,000. The record on twenty-seven of these States shows an increase of one per cent. over December and of thirty-one per cent. over January, 1922.

Contracts awarded in New England during January amounted to $22,770,400, which was the largest January total on record, an increase of 9 per cent. over December last and of 42 per cent. over January, 1922.

RESIDENTIAL BUILDING LEADS

Included in last month's total were the following important items—$14,840,000, or 65 per cent., for residential buildings; $3,151,000, or 14 per cent., for business buildings; $1,959,000, or 9 per cent., for industrial plants; and $1,283,000, or 6 per cent., for educational buildings. Completed new work reported during the month amounted to $56,572,000.

Throughout the thirty-six States represented in the total, residential construction showed the same preponderance, amounting to $112,695,000, or 61 per cent., an unusually high figure for this time of year. Second in importance were business buildings amounting to $36,321,000, or 15 per cent. of the total. Other important items were: $26,642,000, or 12 per cent., for public works and utilities; $23,152,000, or 10 per cent., for industrial buildings, and $15,-862,000, or 7 per cent., for educational buildings.

SPRING ACTIVITY FORECASTED

The contemplated new work reported in January amounted to $813,-280,000, which was more than three times the amount of work started during the month. The enormous volume of contemplated work reported in December and January seems to indicate a heavy volume of activity in the coming Spring months.

MILLER OFFERS AWNING VALUES

One of the pioneer awning and decorating firms of Boston is the business known as Miller, the Awning Man, located at No. 239 State street, Boston. This business was organized by Robert Miller seventy-five years ago. The present owner, Robert J. Miller, has been connected with the organization for fifty years.

This concern makes a specialty of providing decorations for parties, weddings, public celebrations and other social and community activities, and has had some of the largest decorating contracts ever awarded in Boston and suburban towns.

FEDERAL RANGES IN DEMAND

The influence of the enormous amount of residential construction underway is making itself felt, not only in the lumber and building material market, but also in the demand for heating equipment for the home.

According to A. K. Kiff, manager of the sales department of the Samuel Supply Company of No. 50 Union street, Boston, this company has booked orders for Federal ranges delivery on which will extend until well into May, and the outlook for good business for the balance of the year is exceptionally bright.

The Federal line of ranges, water heaters, furnaces and steam boilers is manufactured in Plymouth, Mass., and the workmanship is of the sturdy New England grade which has made New England products famous throughout the world for quality. Yet because of the various economies developed in the manufacturing, as well as the fact that the Samuel Supply Company is located out of the high rent districts, the prices at which Federal products are offered are the lowest in the market.

According to Mr. Kiff, the overhead expense of this location is fully 25 per cent. less than customary, making it possible to give the customers of this house the benefit of lower prices. An attractive booklet, giving full information about the Federal line, will be sent to all inquirers, or the various numbers may be inspected at the store at No. 50 Union street without incurring any obligation.

At the present time a large part of the business being done is in the repairing of awnings for Spring delivery. In order to keep the employes at work during the dull season especially attractive prices on this class of work are being quoted.

Seven months ago the Miller organization, anticipating an increase in the prices of awning materials bought a large supply, so that they are now in a position to offer new awnings for next season's use at the same low prices that prevailed last season.

Miss Susannah Wood's Nuptials Set for Next Week, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

THE relatives of the season's buds are very nice people, who are determined that the debutante festivities shall die anything but a sudden death. Though the season, technically, is over, the buds and their cavaliers still find ample opportunity to twinkle their toes at this or that entertainment.

On Tuesday of next week Mrs. Herman Parker of Commonwealth avenue is giving a dinner dance at the Hotel Somerset in honor of her debutante niece, Miss Elizabeth Percival. The latter, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David C. Percival of Commonwealth avenue, is a tall, slender girl with blonde hair. She's especially fond of aquatic sports, I believe, and is frequently seen sailing a boat over the waters around Marblehead Neck, where her parents have a Summer place.

THE Charles Minot Amorys (Gladys Munn) and Harold S. Vanderbilt (more familiarly known as "Mike" to his friends along the North Shore) were among the guests whom Vincent Astor entertained at dinner the other evening. The affair took place at the Everglades Club in Palm Beach, where both the Amorys and Mr. Vanderbilt usually make a long season of it during the cold months. Following the dinner, additional guests dropped in for the dancing.

A WEEK from today—and Harcourt Amory, Jr., joins the ranks of the benedicts. The bride-to-be, who isn't a Boston girl, is Miss Susannah Wood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morgan Wood, formerly of Dayton, O. For several seasons the Woods have been making their home on the North Shore at Ipswich, which, I believe, they intend to make their permanent home.

The ceremonial is scheduled to take place at high noon at Emmanuel Church. Miss Wood should make a lovely bride, for she's a slim girl with blue eyes and dark hair, which she wears parted in the middle and done in the simplest way, lending her face a rather demure look. At Saturday's ceremonial she will have but one attendant, her sister, Mrs. Gorman, who will serve as matron of honor.

The groom, a Harvard '16 man, had the distinction of being one of the managers of the all-important Assemblies this season. He has a splendid war record and is very popular with his set. His brother, John S. Amory, will serve him as best man, and a large and efficient corps of ushers will be on hand to show the guests to their seats.

BEFORE the last snow drifts melted away, I wanted to print the accompanying picture of Miss Mabel Holden, one of the season's loveliest debutantes. Miss Holden was snapped as she took part in a recent charity entertainment given by society folk, and is wearing some priceless furs captured in the Arctic regions by a well-known explorer. To judge by the business-like look of the trap which she's carrying the wearer seems all armed to capture some more.

Miss Holden, who's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua B. Holden, was of the Boston buds taking part in the debutante festivities in Baltimore. Miss Eliza Bacon was another bud going down to the Oriole city for some of the big dances there.

THERE'S a wide society interest in the talk which Burton Holmes is giving today at Symphony Hall on the Passion Play at Oberammergau. A large group of notable folk are sponsoring the lecture, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the wounded ex-service men around Boston.

The names of Mrs. Langdon Frothingham, Mrs. Charles F. Greenough, 2d, S. Parker Bremer and Mrs. Robert Treat Paine are only a few of those on the list of patrons.

BRITISH DEBT UP TO SENATE

Washington, Feb. 10.—Although the Senate finance committee today considered legislation by which the House yesterday approved the British debt settlement agreement, the time of Senate action on it was problematical.

The House approved the agreement 291 to 44, only one Republican joining a minority of the Democratic members in opposition.

The Shipping Bill, meanwhile, had taken a position ahead of the funding legislation in the Senate. Chairman Jones of the commerce committee having called up the former measure yesterday immediately after passage of the Army Appropriation Bill.

He announced the Ship Bill would not be laid aside except by a vote of the Senate.

MRS. GOULD LEFT $800,000 IN JEWELS

New York, Feb. 10.—Mrs Edith Kingdon Gould, who died suddenly on her private golf course in November, 1921, owned $800,000 worth of jewelry.

This is seen in the appraisal of her estate, a report of which has been made to the Surrogates' Court.

The most valuable of her jewels were a diamond and emerald corsage, worth $200,000; pearl necklace, $108,000; pearl necklace, $127,000; rope of pearls, $85,000; diamond tiara, $48,000; pearl sautoir, $32,000; diamond necklace, $32,000; diamond and emerald pendant; $36,000 pearl and diamond crown; $22,000 and fourteen of pearls and diamonds, $21,000.

WOMAN WITH 6 MATES HELD AS SWINDLER

Washington, Feb. 10.—Six living husbands, with no divorce from any of them, all married within eight years is the unusual matrimonial record of Florence Mae Dibble, as revealed today by the Department of Justice.

The woman, who is only twenty-eight, is under arrest, charged with violating the War Risk Insurance Act. Raymond C. Adare, the fifth husband, on whose account she was receiving an allotment, reported to the War Risk Bureau she had other husbands living.

Here is the woman's record, according to Department of Justice agents:

July 6, 1918, married to Paul H. Snapp.

December 10, 1918, married to Cornelius Regan.

$500 WORTH OF SHIRTS AND COLLARS BURN UP

Some folks in the neighborhood of Cross street in Somerville will have to go to church tomorrow in little old last week's shirt and collar. Chollie Wong's laundry at No. 58 Cross street had a fire today which burned up $500 worth of laundry ready for tonight's delivery.

TO FIGHT STATE CONTROL OF TEACHING

New York, Feb. 10 (By International News Service).—Condemnation of State laws which "tend to restrict freedom of teaching" in the schools of America, was made today by Dr. Henry R. Linville, president of the Teachers' Union of New York, in announcing the opening of a nation wide campaign to fight any laws which tend to "state control of opinion."

The campaign, led by the Teachers' Union and supported by noted educators in the country, is particularly aimed at the Lusk laws in New York State and similar efforts to enforce such laws in Oregon, Texas and Kentucky.

"The spirit of the Lusk Laws," said Dr. Linville, "has spread beyond the confines of the State of New York. Last November a bare majority of the people of Oregon voted to close the parochial and other private schools, and to force all children between the ages of eight and sixteen to attend the public schools. We call this religious intolerance.

"In Texas a bill has been introduced to compel all private schools to teach exactly what is taught in public schools.

Cox on Vacation

Governor Cox, a devotee of Winter sports, left today for a brief recreation "somewhere in New Hampshire." He was accompanied by Mrs. Cox.

STAGE AND SCREEN
BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN

POLLOCK BLAZES HIS OWN BRIGHT TRAIL

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

IT is an axiom of the stage—at least, a generally accepted belief among the people who move within the drama—that the man who writes criticism cannot write plays. And the idea is almost completely supported by facts—surface facts, to be sure, but fairly authoritative, nevertheless, if you count up the failures that have fallen upon critics who have attempted to teach their typewriters new tricks. There is one rift in this popular conception, however, which once more calls attention to the futility of taking too much for granted. During the last few years three great plays—enormously successful plays—have been written by men who are either still active professional critics, or who once were, and seeing the error of their ways avoided further sin by turning their thoughts upon other ventures. In any event, a cherished belief of the theatre falls into complete collapse.

KNOCKS PET TRADITION INTO SMALL BITS

Whereupon we feel safe in introducing Channing Pollock, whose newest play, "The Fool," moves into the Selwyn on Monday to duplicate. If possible, the sensational success achieved during the five months it has sold Broadway by the ears. A specially organized Boston company will carry Mr. Pollock's message to New England. When Dame Fortune clutched Channing Pollock by the arm and through "The Fool" lifted him to high achievement as a dramatist, he completed a triumvirate of critics that smashed a pet tradition into the well-known and frequently mentioned smithereens. This trio of critic-playwrights includes William Archer, foremost of London's group of critical writers; Alfred Savoir of Paris, and, of course, Mr. Pollock, who now confesses, with blushing modesty, that he is sorry for all the cruel things he used to write about plays and players.

CHANNING POLLOCK
Single-handed, he made his play the talk of actors.

This triumvirate is something of an international group, and is enjoying itself immensely shaking dollars, shillings and francs out of bulging box offices.

POLLOCK ADMITS HE'S A REFORMED CRITIC

A good many years have passed since Mr. Pollock played critic for a Washington newspaper, but they have been fruitful years of service to the theatre, first as a press agent and later as a playwright striving for a high place in his profession. A dozen or so plays of better than average merit, all of which brought financial reward, did not satisfy him. He had a still greater objective. With "The Sign on the Door," which was admirably presented by Marjorie Rambeau, Mr. Pollock was definitely acknowledged as a dramatist of skill and imagination, but he will tell you that even the tremendous vogue of that play left him with grave doubts. Then he wrote "The Fool," a play that went the rounds, from manager to manager, and was always returned to the author with a polite note explaining why it was quite impossible of production, to say nothing of its lack of appeal. "I felt that it was a great play," says Mr. Pollock, "but I was alone in the thought. I knew it was the only play I had ever written that possessed a great, living theme, but I couldn't make any manager get my point of view. I can tell you now that I regard it as my first play—all the others are just chatter in the form of dialogue." "The Fool" was finally produced by the Selwyns, and it is no secret that they looked upon it as a reckless undertaking. So Mr. Pollock did most of the work—possibly he insisted upon it. At any rate, he selected the cast; he directed the rehearsals and he went forth and preached about his play in pulpits and almost anywhere he could find a place to stand on a box. And "The Fool" was a success—one of the biggest ever known in the history of Broadway's drama. Over in New York, in the region of Forty-second street, there are a dozen producing managers—the giants of the drama. They are men of vision and ability; men whose efforts keep the theatres of the country open, and they all said "The Fool" could not succeed. Single-handed Channing Pollock fought his own battle for his play, and single-handed he has made New York like it and cry for more. The success of "The Fool" is a triumph for its author—a very personal triumph. Let the managers weep.

NEW BLONDE BEAUTY STEPS INTO SPOTLIGHT

WHILE the success of "The Fool" has made a number of managers look foolish, please do not be deceived into believing they are foolish all the time. Anyone may guess the wrong horse will win the Brooklyn Handicap and then borrow carfare to get home. That is what makes racing profitable to some people. Mr. A. H. Woods just naturally happens to be one of the important producers who guessed wrong on "The Fool," and this is rather surprising, because if there is any single branch of the theatre in which he is gifted it is the ability to discover dramatic values in a cold manuscript. He may have fumbled in the case of "The Fool," but his fielding average is still high. Mr. Woods has also exhibited a rare talent in picking unknown artists from the byways of the drama and moulding them into popular favorites. Of course this is a form of theatrical sport in which you may also put your money on the wrong number, but the Al Woods record to date makes a reasonably favorable showing. With something like this in mind he made a tour of observation through such peaceful regions of Europe as he could find, and before he engaged passage for his own New York he had slipped one of his progressive contracts into the be-jewelled fingers of Ilse Mavenga, the brightest and most popular of Berlin's blonde soubrettes. Mr. Woods knew exactly what he was doing and why he was doing it—he had made up his mind to give America another Mitzi, and he believed he had found her.

ILSE MAVENGA

The little lady with the golden hair and silvery voice may have had difficulty in solving Mr. Woods' system of German speech, but his contract was as clear as the downfall of Wilhelm, and there was immediate activity along the dotted line. Miss (or should it be Frau-lein) Mavenga was thereupon transplanted from the Berlin to the American stage and you may see her any night in "Naughty Diana" at the Shubert. As a matter of cold and carefully calculated fact, she is the naughty Diana of the piece, but she isn't half as wicked as the title implies. Miss Mavenga is a dainty little girl, with a large voice that appears to be at least three grades above musical comedy requirements, and you can easily believe the advance reports that she has sung in grand opera. She has a spirited style of acting that deserved a better role than that which falls to her in "Naughty Diana." You may leave it to Al Woods to correct that detail in good time.

"THE BAT" ALMOST EQUALS LONG RUN RECORD

"THE Bat" is at the end of its career in Boston, with one more week to run at the Wilbur. This mystery play, which threatened to establish a new record for the local stage, will move away with twenty-four weeks to its credit—not quite enough to upset the records established by "Under Cover," with twenty-nine weeks, or "The Man From Home," with twenty-seven weeks. After a week in Portland, where "The Bat" will be seen following its Boston engagement, the company will disband. Of this original company, Effie Ellsler, May Vokes, Anne Morrison, John Marston, Robert Vaughan, Charles Coleman and Joseph Selman have played together for three years without missing a performance. Tragedy entered into the local engagement when Harrison Hunter, who played the title role, died after a serious operation. When the curtain descends at the Wilbur next Saturday night "The Bat" will have played 300 performances in this city.

Heavy Insurance On Whiteman's Jazz Band

Insurance policies totalling $10,000 have been taken out by Paul Whiteman and his original orchestra, who make their musical debut at Mechanics Building tonight against a snow storm here today. Fearing that many Bostonians will not believe that he has at last been lured away from Broadway, Whiteman is offering $5,000 to any charity designated by Mayor Curley if he and his band do not appear tonight.

Tonight's concert, followed by a dance, takes on the importance of a regular dramatic premiere, due to the fact that this is the first time the famous composer has left Broadway, and the most popular composer and director will appear in person to conduct his celebrated band of fifteen musicians.

Soubrette of the Eighties Still in the Ring

Even though styles in playwriting have undergone many changes since Minnie Palmer, now in "Lightnin'" at the Hollis, had the theatrical world literally at her feet in the early '80s, she is of the opinion that the soubrette will again come into her own and achieve the same degree of popularity as did Lotta, Maggie Mitchell and Annie Pixley in a former generation.

Minnie Palmer

Miss Palmer was a world-famed soubrette of the '80s, who, after absenting herself from the stage for a number of years, has at last returned in the role of a Reno divorcee in "Lightnin'." She was to the theatrical world of the '80s what Mitzi is to the present-day theatre. She was the toast of London and the pride of New York, a leading woman at the age of fourteen, and it was two years later, when she was sixteen years old, that she made her tremendous hit in "My Sweetheart," a play which lasted for fifteen years and in which she toured America, England and South Africa. Her indestructible blond prettiness has survived the touch of the years, and she is one of the most chic of the Reno divorcees in "Lightnin'."

Boston Girl Naturally Likes Baseball

When little Edith Thayer, who sings the leading feminine role in "Blossom Time," the operetta which comes to the Boston Opera House on Monday, inadvertently mentioned that she was a scion of good old Puritan stock, there was a horrid readjustment of preconceived notions of just what a Puritan was or ought to be. And when she mischievously announced that she loved to play ball better than anything else, except sing, she certainly handed the dignity of the Plymouth Rockers a terrific blow.

"I was born and educated in Boston," she explains, "and when I was sixteen years old I went to Paris, where I studied under Jean de Reszke for four years. Then I came to New York and had my first part as a chorus girl in 'Somewhere Else,' under Henry W. Savage. When 'The Geisha' was revived I understudied the star, Mme. Zepilli. Arthur Hammerstein heard me and engaged me to succeed Mlle. Trentini in the principal role in 'The Firefly,' when that opera went on the road. And that was my start."

Irene Bordoni in Novel Song Recital

Irene Bordoni will step out of her character in "The French Doll" tomorrow night at the Tremont Theatre and will make her Boston debut as a concert singer.

She will be heard for the first time here in a recital and will offer a repertoire of unusual songs, ranging from the classical to the latest of the popular variety. For the most part Mademoiselle Bordoni will sing in French, her native tongue. Others will be in Spanish and some in English, so there will be plenty of variety in the program. For the French and Spanish songs Mlle Bordoni will give a few descriptive words of explanation.

PLAYS THAT REMAIN

Who's Who and What's What Among the Shows That Are Staying Over From Week to Week at the Local Theatres

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

"Lightnin'" at the Hollis. (Eighth week.) Tears and smiles arranged to order in the most popular play of this generation. It's all old stuff, which is why everybody likes it and cries for more.

* * *

"The Bat" at the Wilbur. (Twenty-fourth week.) All things must end—even this mystery play of chills and laughs. Your final opportunities to see stage crime done in faultless fashion. The last week.

* * *

"Just Married" at the Plymouth. (Fifth week.) A refined and harmless bedroom farce, or, rather, stateroom farce, with Lynne Overman presenting the most artistic "sauce" of the century.

* * *

"Naughty Diana" at the Shubert. (Second week.) Musical farce in which you are led to believe very wicked things are to happen and then discover that all is sweet and lovely.

Ed Wynn in "The Perfect Fool" at the Colonial. (Second week.) The tireless Mr. Wynn in a series of humorous scenes in which, almost single handed, he carries the entire show. Funniest thing on record.

* * *

Irene Bordoni in "The French Doll" at the Tremont. (Second week.) Amusing comedy of an impecunious French family trying to get money without working. Admirably drawn characterizations. The last week.

* * *

* * *

Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood" at the Park. The film's most acrobatic comedian in romantic comedy. The last week.

Colleges and Jazz Run Hand in Hand

A college education, despite Mr. A. B. Boe, still has its uses. For instance nobody can get into Ben Bernie's "Highbrow Eleven" without it. The "Highbrow Eleven" is not a football team, but an orchestra, which is specializing in dance music and is at present making a tour of the B. F. Keith Vaudeville Circuit. It has acquired its facetious title because of the eleven members, seven are college men. The other four attend classes between engagements. Mr. Bernie says it is this. He also sees that speech, behavior, even the haircuts of his young protegees follow the true collegiate tradition.

"Colleges," said Mr. Bernie, "made us what we are today. We don't allow anyone to knock 'em. We find that a knowledge of the Einstein theory, trigonometry, comparative zoology and Freud, among other things, helps us considerably in providing music for the tripping of the light fantastic."

CHILDREN'S CONCERTS

The second and last pair of Young People's Concerts to be given this season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will take place next Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons. All tickets for these concerts have been apportioned through the public schools of Greater Boston.

Wilhelm Bachaus, pianist, will give his only concert of the season in Boston in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, March 18.

"THE FOOL" PROVIDES WEEK'S NOVELTY

The new week at the theatres is not without its novelty, for an appeal is made to the non-playgoer as well as to the seasoned regular who breaks out on first and other nights. This situation is brought about by the coming of Channing Pollock's "The Fool" to the Selwyn, where a special company, organized for the Boston engagement, will dispense a new kind of theatrical commodity. Another change in the local fare will be the visit of "Blossom Time" to the Boston Opera House, where Franz Schubert's melodies will fill the air. For lighter amusement you may try "A Prince There Was" at the St. James, and if you prefer the genuine old-fashioned drama you will find a new edition of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the Arlington. Beyond these few attractions there will be no changes at the playhouses.

SELWYN — Channing Pollock's play, "The Fool," will open its local engagement at the Selwyn Theatre Monday night. Subjects generally tabooed on the stage are dealt with boldly and forcefully in this study of present-day American life. An impressive production is promised and the company will include Charles Millward, Alexandra Carlisle, Helen Holcomb, Hale Norcross, Clarence Handyside and Frank Conlon. This organization is known as the Boston Company, as it was specially engaged for this run of the play.

KEITH'S—Ben Bernie and his orchestra head the Keith bill for the coming week. Mr. Bernie used to be an eccentric violinist, who will be remembered for his unlimited supply of ready wit. Olsen and Johnson, another feature, have made themselves famous throughout the Keith Circuit for their ability to get monkey shines from such an aristocratic piece of furniture as the piano. Marie Walsh and Frank Ellis are presenting an up-to-date skit called "The Tea Boy and the No Girl," and other interesting acts will complete the new bill.

CASINO—Dave Marion, in his famous role of Snuffy, the "Chapman" appears in "The Marion Show" at Waldron's Casino this week with a large cast, a chorus of thirty five girls and with Delmore's Trained Lions as an extra attraction. Moving pictures and vaudeville of superior quality complete the three-in-one continuous program.

ARLINGTON—Newton and Livingston will present at the Arlington Theatre for two weeks, commencing Monday evening, "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The producers have secured an exceptional cast for the twenty weeks' tour of the larger cities and the thread of the story has been cleverly reconstructed. In this version there are thirty characters and the story is told in four acts and twenty scenes.

CAPITOL—Mary Pickford in the last popular-priced showing in this city of her very production of "Tess of the Storm Country" will be the feature at Gordon's Capitol Theatre next week. Lloyd Hamilton, Gloria Hope, David Torrence, Forrest Robinson and a fine supporting company surround the star.

GLOBE—Bessie Love and Anita Stewart will head the bill at Loew's Globe Theatre on Monday. Miss Love will appear in "Forget Me Not," and Miss Stewart's production will be "Rose of the Sea."

"BLOSSOM TIME"—After a run of over 500 performances in New York, "Blossom Time," the operetta based upon incidents in the life of Franz Schubert, the composer, comes to the Boston Opera House on Monday night for a return engagement of two weeks. With a score consisting entirely of the famous composer's loveliest melodies which are delicately blended into incidents in the life of Franz Scubert, it represents the most distinguished musical production in years.

LOEW'S STATE—Loew's Orpheum Frolics, Victor Hyde's spectacular musical revue made up of local boys and girls, will move into Loew's State Theatre for the coming week. In addition to the Frolics, the program will also show Mae Murray in her latest production, "Jazzmania." A new comedy and late interesting world events shown in motion pictures completes the bill.

MAJESTIC—Cecil Lean and Cleo Mayfield, popular musical comedy stars, will be headliners at the Majestic the coming week in "The Blushing Bride," a revue version of the production of that name, in which they appeared in New York last season. Other features include Harry and Grace Ellsworth in songs and dances, "On the Platform," a one-act playlet, and several other acts.

ORPHEUM.—An attractive bill of vaudeville is announced at Loew's Orpheum Theatre for the coming week. The headline act is styled "Four Queens and a Joker," a melodious musical gambol featuring Carl Francis and a quartet of charming debutantes. Surrounding this distinguished number is George Rosener, America's representative character artist, and a half dozen other acts. Harold Lloyd in "Dr. Jack" will be the photoplay feature.

GAYETY—Frank Finney's Revue with Frank himself as chief comedian comes to the Gayety Theatre this week. The star comedian has written "Stepping Out" as the main feature of the program, giving wide opportunity for songs, dances, ensembles and novelty numbers. Hiss McClain, gifted with fine voice and pleasing personality, leads the feminine contingent.

ENID BENNET in "ROBIN HOOD" BOSTON

ST. JAMES—The popularity of George M. Cohan's plays with the patrons of the St. James seems established for next week Mr. Giles will present, "A Prince There Was," which will mark the third Cohan play produced this season. Mr. Gilbert and Miss Bushnell will fill the stellar roles, and Theresa Kilburn, a child actress will assist them.

OLYMPIA—D. W. Griffith's "One Exciting Night," perhaps the most thrilling mystery tale ever thrown on the silver sheet, tops the bill at Gordon's Olympia, beginning Monday. Five acts of vaudeville and the regular film and musical features will complete the program.

SCOLLAY SQ. OLYMPIA—"Tess of the Storm Country," Mary Pickford's elaborate picture, will head the list of attractions at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia, beginning Monday.

CODMAN SQ.—Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country" will be the feature for the entire week at Gordon's Codman Square Theatre.

CENTRAL SQUARE—For the first half of the week beginning Monday, Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country" will be the drawing card at Gordon's Central Square.

STRAND—"Kick In" will be the feature from Monday through Wednesday at Gordon's Strand Theatre.

MODERN AND BEACON.—The picturing of Charles E. Blaney's play, "The Little Church Around the Corner," will be accompanied by the photoplay made from Peter B. Kyne's story, "Brothers Under the Skin," in the picture program at the Modern and Beacon Theatres next week. A film comedy and news pictures will also be shown.

BOSTON—Tom Mix in "Romance Land" is the feature at the Boston Theatre for the coming week. The vaudeville contains plenty of unusual features including Harry Cahne "History's Greatest Mental-ist."

Coming Events

Ruth St. Denis will give a repeat performance of her classical dances at the Boston Opera House on Friday afternoon, March 2.

The attraction at the Tremont beginning Monday, February 19, will be Lionel Atwill in "The Comedian," a comedy of temperament adapted by David Belasco from the French of Sacha Guitry.

"Listening In," a satirical mystery comedy, will come to the Wilbur on Monday, February 19, following the engagement of "The Bat."

Demands Honorable Degree for Making Laughs

Here's a new degree—"D. C."

It stands for "Doctor of Comedy" and Dave Marion thinks that this is just the title that is coming to man who make good in the ancient and honorable art of making other people laugh and forget their troubles.

Dave, who is with "The Marion Show" at Waldron's Casino next week, avers that it is not such an unreasonable suggestion as some might think, this idea of a title for regular stage comedians.

"How does one get a degree like Doctor of Laws or Doctor of Philosophy or Doctor of Medicine," asks Dave. "He goes out and studies for it. He works for it."

LOOK! LOOK! UNCLE TOM IS BACK

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" is back. Through this generation and the one before it no theatrical season was complete without at least one engagement of the play that gave Little Eva and Topsy to the theatrical world. A new version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be seen at the Arlington next week.

Many of the stage's greatest artists have been seen in one role or another in this stirring story of anti-slavery days. Among the well known players who have appeared in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" are Wilton Lackaye who played Uncle Tom; J. H. Stoddard, who had the same role; Lotta, who played Topsy, when she was eighteen; Emily Rigl, who claimed to have been the best Topsy ever known; Effie Elsler, now at the Wilbur in "The Bat," played Little Eva at the age of five.

At Last, They Cry, Here's Something New

For the past five years the critics and the public have been shouting from the house tops for something new in pictorial entertainment. Virtually every picture released boasted of having a new plot, a new angle a new star, a new author or something else out of the ordinary, but still the critics howled for "something new."

At last the leading critics throughout the United States admit that there is "something new under the sun." It is the unusual theme of "The Town That Forgot God," William Fox's sensational photodrama at Tremont Temple.

'ROBIN HOOD' NEAR END OF RUN

The concluding week of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at the Park Theatre begins tomorrow, and the final performances are set for Sunday afternoon and evening, February 18th. The picture will thus have completed 6 continuous weeks in Boston. This prosperity is a pleasing commentary upon the preference of the public for worthy picture productions without the dangerous qualities that deservedly bring condemnatory criticism.

Mr. Fairbanks as producer and principal player did not venture into dangerous fields for his story, but chose one that has enjoyed perennial popularity with English-speaking people. Moreover, he selected a personage the enacting of which drew upon his most favored gifts of expression and physical accomplishments. He vivified Robin of Sherwood Forest with a surety and truthful thoroughness that satisfies the most exacting. He has made of the production a memorable picturing of the life and times of Richard the Lion-Hearted, which carries to the minds of spectators a refreshing and illuminating reproduction of these heart-stirring romantic days.

Sometimes It's Hard Work to Be Funny

The funny man of any stock company is always interesting. Ralph Remley, the man with the Boston Stock Company who makes 'em laugh, is no exception.

"Being comedian, according to Mr. Remley," is always looking for the funny side of life and the humor among people. Some people are funnier when they are serious and the stage comedian must have the ability to see the ridiculousness of things and folks and to present them to others in the same light in which he views them. Sometimes being funny is hard work, but if the audience laughs, the actor feels repaid for his efforts. The biggest drawback to a comedian is that should he by any chance be selected for some serious part in a play, the audience most assuredly will take his serious moments for comedy because it is hard for them to believe that a comedian can say anything serious.

Ralph Remley

BOSTON MAN TOPS NEW FIRM

The newer activities of the drama, as reflected by the output of plays along Broadway and Forty-second street, has taken on something of a New England tinge. For the latest and most promising of producing enterprises is headed by Fred J. McIsaac, formerly dramatic editor of the Boston American. In association with Samuel Geneen, Mr. McIsaac, who for years viewed dramatic performances from a comfortable upholstered chair in the orchestra front, is now enjoying the thrill that comes only to the play producer who knows for a dead certainty he has a great drama in his possession, but isn't quite sure how fast the public pulse will beat over its unfolding.

Fred J. McIsaac

The new firm of Geneen and McIsaac enter the producing field with a carefully laid plan of operation—one that carries every indication of success. On the presumption that at least one production in five should make a profitable return, they have established a fund for the production of five non-musical plays. If one of the five catches the public ear the plan is a success. Already one play, "Steamroller Brendar," has been produced. It fell by the wayside, and another was promptly put into rehearsal for the second experiment. This is called "Old Man Smith," and is scheduled for an early showing.

As a safeguard against the hazard of play producing, Messrs. Geneen and McIsaac expect to embark upon the cabaret business with something of a Russian accent. They have leased a building in Fiftieth street, New York, where Russian food and entertainment will be dispensed. As Mr. McIsaac remarked to a friend on a recent visit to Boston, "This is a great season for Russian art, and we propose to meet the situation both on the stage and in the dining room."

HANDEL AND HAYDN

Sir Edward Elgar's masterpiece, the "Dream of Gerontius," a setting of the poem of Cardinal Newman, promises to have a memorable performance by the Handel and Haydn Society. Emil Mollenhauer conductor, at Symphony Hall tomorrow afternoon. Of the soloists to appear at this concert, Richard Crooks, a young tenor of New York, has not yet sung in Boston.

Orpheum Frolics to Move to State Theatre

In consequence of the success attained by Loew's Orpheum Frolics, a unique musical revue, made up of talented local boys and girls during the past week at the Orpheum Theatre, it is announced that this production in its entirety will be the headline feature at Loew's State Theatre the coming week. The entire company had less than two weeks' rehearsal and were selected from a list of 1,000 applications. The company was coached by Victor Hyde, who conceived and staged the piece. This particular venture has elicited unusual praise from prominent city and stage officials, including Governor Cox and Mayor Curley.

SYMPHONY PROGRAM

Carlos Salzedo, harp virtuoso and composer, will play the solo part in his symphonic poem "Terres Enchantees," which will be performed at the next pair of Boston Symphony concerts, to be given at Symphony Hall next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening.

Butler Gives Overman Real Competition

There is an actor in "Just Married" at the Plymouth who runs a close second to Lynne Overman in showing how artistic a well-gathered "mouse" may appear to the untrained eye. He is John Butler, who moves through the performance in the constant agony of attempting to square himself with his newly acquired wife for fancied indiscretions. Mr. Butler was not always an actor, although he had been plying that art for some time. Originally he was a salesman for the Buffalo Car Wheel Company, one of the progressive industries of his home town. Mr. Butler's forte in the drama seems to be to portray nice young men who easily fall into trouble, and in "Just Married" he lives up to these artistic demands.

English Producer Buys Lean's New Song

Charles B. Cochran, the London producer, has purchased from Cecil Lean the English rights to the latter's song, "Different Days." This song and the attendant business is one of the hits of "The Blushing Bride" which has been transformed into Shubert Vaudeville and will be seen at the Majestic the coming week. It is a laughable satire on the mladeeds of the modern cabaret banditti and gets a good hearing from anyone who has labored heroically for room on a crowded dance floor about a yard square and is then ordered off for shimmying. Mr. Cochran, who saw "The Blushing Bride" during its lengthy run in New York, says that this cabaret condition holds true in England and he plans to introduce "Different Days" and its comedy scenes into a new revue he is preparing in London. Cecil Lean writes practically all his own comedy scenes.

Country Girl Has Best of Stage Chances

In the long run a country-bred girl has some advantages over the city girl in stage life, if you can believe Helen McClain, the prima donna of Frank Finney's Revue at the Gayety Theatre this week.

Miss McClain's opinion was expressed in the course of some discussion of the plot of the production. The show is a musical burlesque entitled "Stepping Out," and concerns the adventures of a country girl who went to the city and a city girl who fared forth to the country. Miss McClain was inclined to favor the rural side.

SISTER IN CELL OF WIDOW IN MURDER CASE

MRS. ETHEL BEAN

Wife of Rangeley mail carrier, accused of his death. Maine folks wonder if State will charge her with killing him in effort to collect $3,000 life insurance. A sister of the accused woman has been allowed by the sheriff to share her jail cell until she is brought into court on the murder charge.

BABY DOLL STAR IN MENTAL FLIP FLOP GAME

"Baby Doll" Baker changed her mind—as any girl is likely to do—on an important point today.

"Baby Doll," alias Eleanor Nelson, was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction by Chief Justice Bolster in Municipal Court Thursday, after being found guilty with John "Romeo" McGovern, former policeman of Court square station, on a statutory charge.

Both appealed. Lacking $500 bail "Baby Doll" was sent to Charles street jail to await outcome of her appeal to the Superior Court.

Today she appeared before Judge Leuris in Municipal Court to withdraw her appeal, in which case she would be sent down to Deer Island on the afternoon boat to serve sentence.

She rose from a chair in the court room to step to the rail to withdraw her appeal. Suddenly she changed her mind. When she arrived at the rail and faced the court she said:

"I will not withdraw my appeal. I have changed my mind again. I think I will go back to Charles Street Jail and wait for my trial before the Superior Court."

So she was taken back to jail again. And she missed the afternoon boat down to Deer Island.

BOSTON-BOUND SHIP SEEKS PORT FOR COAL

Halifax, N. S., Feb. 10.—The Shipping Board steamer Bellingham, bound from Raumo and Androssin via Falmouth for Boston, is making for St. John's, N. F., short of coal, according to word received by J. M. Dodge, Halifax representative of the Shipping Board. When reported the steamer was 645 miles east southeast of St. John's. It is expected she will reach that port Wednesday. The Bellingham left Androssin for Boston January 4.

EJECTED WOMAN GETS $1,500 VERDICT

Baltimore, Feb. 10.—A jury in Superior Court here thought Mrs. Teresa Hagerty was humiliated to such an extent that they awarded her $500 more than she asked in her suit against Isidor Lakein, a jeweler. Mrs. Hagerty alleged she purchased a ring from Lakein, and when she went to his establishment to tell him it was not what it was guaranteed to be, she was ejected forcibly. She sued for $1,000 and was awarded $1,500.

CHARGE MERCHANT CONCEALED ASSETS

Joseph Barron, president of the Barron Furniture Company of Brockton, was held in $5,000 bail today by United States Commissioner Hayes on a charge of concealing assets from the trustee in bankruptcy of the company. He pleaded not guilty. The hearing will be February 20. The property alleged to have been concealed is valued at $25,000. The company was declared bankrupt January 11.

WINS $727 VERDICT OVER HOUSEBOAT

George F. Gills, a Boston fireman, today won a verdict of $727.90 against Babb Briggs, yacht broker, for alleged false representation. The suit involved sale of the houseboat "Azalea" in 1917. Gill alleged he bought the houseboat and found it to be valueless.

CHARGE WIDOW, JEALOUS, SLEW HUSBAND

Farmington, Me., Feb. 10.—That Mrs. Ethel Bean murdered her husband, Otis Bean, Rangeley Lakes guide and mail carrier because of jealousy of another woman is the implied accusation of County Attorney Courter P. Holman, who is prosecuting the case against the attractive widow.

According to the attorney the state is gradually building up a strong chain of evidence enmeshing the accused woman.

He declared today he had practically abandoned the theory that Bean was murdered for his life insurance, which reverts to Mrs. Bean through the death of her husband.

A sensational tinge will be given the case, he states, when the evidence gathered by the State investigators is made public.

He is carefully concealing the identity of the woman whose friendship for Bean, he claims, was the cause of the tragedy.

Mrs. Frank E. Hollis, sister of Mrs. Bean, ridicules the charges of the county attorney. Her sister's arrest, she declared, was the result of a plot augmented by a couple whose enmity Bean had engendered.

The woman's arrest was a sensational surprise. It caused the release of Norman Mawson of Methuen, Mass., and Jeramiah W. Wheaton of Elmira, N. Y., two woodsmen. They had been held since October 6 last, charged with the crime.

When arrested they welcomed jail, gleeful because they didn't have to work, that their food and winter's heat would be provided, and that "there was nothing in them." They are held now as material witnesses in $1,000 bond.

Mrs. Bean is thirty-two years old, five years younger than her husband. Their married life has been happy, according to friends.

In her cell in Farmington jail the accused widow today was solaced by her sister, Mrs. George Hollis of Portland, who voluntarily passed the night with the compulsory prisoner.

The sheriff was at first loath to allow Mrs. Hollis to undertake this ordeal, but when the young Portland matron beseeched him repeatedly, he ordered the turnkey to place two cots in the small cell.

SUFFOLK INDICTS FOUR FOR MURDER

The Suffolk County Grand Jury today returned indictments against 43 persons and reported 16 "no bills." Four of the number indicted are charged with murder.

Those indicted for first degree murder are Samuel Boccuzzi, Gregory Kuricl and Felix Gesaildo. John L. McGluin is charged with murder in the second degree.

Stanley C. Parker, alias Webster, who was recently arrested charged with having four wives in various parts of New England, was indicted for polygamy.

PARENTS ARRIVE FROM SOUTH AS SON DIES

Exeter, N. H., Feb. 10.—Bryant T. Minard, Jr., of New Orleans, a student at Phillips Academy, died today from pneumonia after ten days' illness. His parents upon being informed earlier in the week that his condition was serious hurried here on the fastest trains and arrived Thursday night.

COP WROTE POEMS TO COOK

Missed "Tight Squeezes" Anderson Said in Love Missives

"If the price of the gift
I'd like to send
Were as high as my thoughts
Of you, my friend,
There wouldn't be money
Enough on earth
To pay the cost of its
Matchless worth."

Thus, poetically, did Theodore "Teddy" Anderson, Boston's "Handsomest Cop," convey his regard to Miss Nora Agnes Stevens, cook to many Back Bay families, according to a postcl card and letters introduced as evidence in her $10,000 heart balm suit brought before Judge Walsh in Middlesex Superior Court.

"The only gift he sent me," testified Miss Stevens, "was a box of handkerchiefs."

"Teddy," a six-foot blonde Viking of the Boston traffic squad, commands the destinies of auto trucks and pedestrians at Winter and Tremont streets. Before going on the force he was a gardener at the home of Mrs. Riley in Newton. Nora was the cook there. They became acquainted. Nora took a new position at a Beacon street home. Teddy joined the force.

KITCHEN PARTIES.

Then, according to the testimony of the girl, Teddy began to call on her with greater frequency until an every other night engagement was the rule.

"Other girls in the house had their gentlemen friends call, and usually there was a sort of a party in my kitchen," she explained to the jury. "We had a merry time. We danced and sang and had music.

"On one occasion," she testified under cross-examination, "a Miss Feeney and a Mr. Holmes and Teddy and I were together there. Miss Feeney got a quart of whiskey from the pantry and the men drank. Mr. Holmes had two drinks and Teddy finished the quart."

Letters headed to "Dear Nora" and signed with six kisses and "Teddy" were read to the jury, after which the girl was subjected to a gruelling cross-examination by Anderson's attorney. "Teddy" sat at his lawyer's elbow mentioning names of other girls who were friendly with him and by whom he sought to prove that his regard for Nora was no greater than for any of them.

PULLED GOLDEN HAIR.

A Marie, who playfully pulled the policeman's golden hair is mentioned in one of the letters he wrote to Nora, while he was on a vacation, as follows:

"Dear Nora:

"Received your letter and was glad to hear from you. My vacation is nearly over and I must get back to work. I've had a good rest, plenty of sleep, but nothing to drink.

"Well, how are you and Marie getting along with Joe and George? Have you been out for a ride yet? Who is Marie fighting now when she hasn't my hair to pull? Tell Marie not to be mad with me. Give her my best wishes. Love from Teddy. XXXXXXX."

The ride he mentions in that letter is further inquired about in another missive that declares Teddy hasn't had a tight squeeze since last he saw Nora. It was written from Hampton Beach where he was on a vacation with another traffic officer. It reads:

"Well, Nora; how are you and how do you like it at Little Compton? It is very quiet around Boston and lonesome since you left. I did not have a tight squeeze since you went.

"How is Joe and George and which is yours? What are you riding in, the little Ford or the horse and buggy, around the country nights? Best regards from Teddy. XXXXX"

SICKBED HERO FACES DEATH AFTER RESCUE

Luigi Terrio of No. 43 Water street, Hyde Park, is threatened with pneumonia at his home, while the parents of Gerald F. Finn, aged three, of No. 31 Oak street, Hyde Park, are praying for the recovery of Terrio, the savior of their little one.

Luigi Terrio.

From his sickbed Terrio saw Gerald go through the ice at Nonquinet River. Although weak with an attack of the grippe, the father hesitated not an instant. Leaving from his bed and pulling on his trousers, he rushed to the river. Breaking through the ice, which was thin at that point, he grasped the child and brought him ashore.

Then, overcome, he collapsed and was carried home by friends.

Gerald F. Finn.

And so, today, Gerald, his parents and his sisters are praying for the sick man that kept the hand of death from their door, even though his own life may be the forfeit.

QUINCY HOSPITAL ROW IS ON AGAIN

Mayor Gustave B. Bates of Quincy today renewed his fight to obtain appointment of a physician as superintendent of the city hospital when he removed Manager William J. Walsh of the hospital board.

Mayor Bates then named his son, Russell T. Bates, assistant registrar of probate in Dedham, and an ex-representative, in Walsh's place. Two weeks ago Russell Bates was also named by his father for the library board.

A short time ago the mayor removed the entire hospital board, including Henry M. Faxon, its chairman, Quincy's wealthiest citizen.

JURY GETS GRAFT CASE NEXT WEEK

Baldwin Place and Synagogue Matters, Involving Thousands, to Be Presented

Evidence given before the Finance Commission in its recent inquiry into alleged graft in connection with the city purchase of Baldwin place playground from Beth Israel Congregation is to be presented to the Grand Jury next week.

The Baldwin place appropriation order for $56,000 was passed by the City Council after having once been defeated.

John C. L. Dowling, counsel for the Finance Commission, charged that fees were accepted for passage of the playground order.

Councilor David J. Brickley, then president of the Council, and Councillor William J. Walsh testified in regard to their bank deposits. Former Senator John J. Gartland testified that he lost in an election bet $2,000, which had been paid him by David Balien, one of the members of the Congregation, in connection with the land deal.

TRUCKLOAD OF LIQUOR SEIZED IN BEVERLY

Beverly, Feb. 10.—A truck load of liquor, believed to have been landed at Gloucester from a fishing schooner, was seized here today. Ralph L. Means of Arlington, driver of the truck, and Warren King, his helper, were arrested.

The lot of liquor comprised 150 cases of high-priced goods.

Chief of Police John E. Hayes, informed that the truck would pass through this city on the way from Gloucester to Boston, had officers posted on the roads with him to intercept it.

The truck was stopped at Beverly Farms Square, and the men aboard it arrested. Customs authorities at Boston were notified of the seizure.

SPIRIT IS FATAL LURE TO STUDENT

Marie Bloomfield Believed to Have Taken Poison Seeking Meeting In Beyond

New York, Feb. 10.—Marie Bloomfield died for love. Not the pulsating love of living man and living woman. For the morbid philosophy she had developed induced the Barnard College junior to consider earthly emotions frosted with a reserve that forbade self-expression.

Here was a love she held sublime. It was an overpowering influence. It impelled her to sip from a glass of cyanide of potassium. Thus she could enter into eternal communication with the spirit of Frederick Bruce Cummings, author, under the name of W. N. P. Barbellion, of "The Journal of a Disappointed Man," a despairing auto-revelation in which the English naturalist rent his soul asunder and flung its shreds before the gaze of the world he scorned, yet feared to leave.

NO LIVING MAN INVOLVED.

This is the conclusion to which have come her kin and friends. They know of no man in life for whom she had more than a passing affection. They know that her reading of Barbellion's despairing self-portraiture sowed in the mind of the honor student a terrible seed, whose flower was a growing determination that life was a painful void and that through death alone could she evade the futile tolling that life demanded.

And so, her relatives and friends believe, reading and re-reading, analyzing and scrutidising what Barbellion penned as his career was shattered with his frame. Miss Bloomfield came to a love for the spirit of the man whose gloomy book was her irresistible obsession.

They could offer no other explanation when they grouped at the Campbell Funeral Church for her funeral services, preparatory to her cremation and shipment of the ashes to her home in Columbus, Ohio.

BROTHER IS PUZZLED.

Professor Leonard Bloomfield, a brother, and a professor at the Ohio State University, could suggest no other motive for her act. He said:

"We never knew her to possess these morbid views, though I was aware she had been reading Barbellion's book. I never felt that book would be her compelling influence, that it would drive her to death.

"Her letters were always bright, even toward the last. She was a girl of good cheer. She looked forward to a career in science.

"That book must have been an irresistible power. It filled her with a tremendous auto-suggestion she could not subdue or did not wish to conquer."

ENGINE SMASHED, 2 HURT IN NO. STATION

Two men were slightly injured and several shaken up when train No. 304 of the Boston & Maine, from Wilmington, skidded on the slippery tracks at the north station and collided with the station terminal bumper.

E. S. Lewis of Wilmington and W. W. Hamlin of Boston were bruised and suffered lacerations.

CAT SAVES LIVES OF TWO WOMEN GAS VICTIMS

"Tabby," a coal black cat, saved two lives in Winthrop today.

Aroused by gas fumes of soft coal in the furnace, the cat went into the bedroom of its mistress, Mrs. Alberia Friedenberg, at No. 280 Revere street, and awakened her by pawing her face.

Mrs. Friedenberg found her sister, Miss Edna Hill, thirty-five years old, unconscious from the gas.

The two women were only slightly affected.

LYNN SHOE PLANTS ON 6-DAY BASIS

Lynn, Feb. 10.—Shoe factories in this city were operated in part today for the first Saturday work in several years, as a result of the Supreme Court's decree confirming the working agreement which provides for Saturday morning work during the rush season. The five-day week has been in effect here for several years past.

Stitchers were most numerous among the workers. Packing room employes were on the job in some cases, and lasters were called to their machines in a few shops.

CAPE COD CANAL VOTE NEXT THURSDAY

Washington, Feb. 10 (By International News Service)—The House Rules Committee today brought in a resolution providing for a vote on Thursday on the proposed purchase by the government of the Cape Cod Canal for $13,500,000.

The vote will decide the fate of the measure which has been pending in Congress for months.

FREED AFTER 2 YEARS LOCKED UP AT ONCE

John Artemis completed a two-year sentence for counterfeiting at Plymouth jail today and was immediately re-arrested on an indictment from the Federal grand jury of New York district, charging him with having photographic negatives of Federal Reserve notes.

PAIR ARE REUNITED BY SON

Los Angeles Man Returns East After Death of Second Wife

Love which flamed in the April of two lives died to a spark in marriage. Now, after thirty-six years' separation, the vital spark has been fanned to flame and a Boston couple will be united again in their second marriage.

They have reached the fall of life. Charles Hilton is sixty-nine years old. His former wife and present fiancee, Emily, of No. 50 Chambers street, is sixty-eight. They will be remarried next Wednesday. A son of the first union, now in middle life, will be present.

WENT TO LOS ANGELES.

In 1887 a divorce was granted Charles Hilton in Suffolk Superior Court on grounds of desertion. He left Boston and went to Los Angeles. There sixteen years later he took to himself his second wife, but managed to keep informed of the whereabouts of his first and their baby son.

As the son grew to boyhood, a steady communication was maintained with his father. Hilton knew that his wife was employed as an attendant in the office of a Chambers street physician. Last August, after twenty years of happy married life, the second Mrs. Hilton died in Los Angeles.

Hilton packed up and arrived soon after in Boston. He went to the home of his divorced wife and they failed to recognize each other. The son was the bond between them which drew them to several meetings.

LOVERS ONCE MORE.

They became lovers once more. Hilton proposed and was accepted. Hilton, joyful, returned to Los Angeles, directing his divorced and intended wife to get a marriage license.

Today Mrs. Hilton is the possessor of the license, and Wednesday, in a Boston Baptist Church, the couple will be remarried.

JUDGE FINES AND WARNS MRS. HUSSEY

Mrs. Glendene M. Hussey, twenty-eight-year-old divorced wife of E. W. Hussey of Saugus, will be sent to the House of Correction if she is seen in the company of Charles H. Stewart, also of Saugus, before June 1. So declared Judge William E. Ludden in Saugus court today, when he sentenced Mrs. Hussey to pay a fine of $50 for a statutory offence.

Three weeks ago Mrs. Hussey was granted a divorce on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. Two weeks later Hussey lead two Saugus policemen to Stewart's camp on Lake Circle. They found the young woman in bed in her night apparel. Stewart, they allege, tried to escape by jumping through a window.

BOY AGREES TO PAY FOR HITTING WOMAN

Joseph A. Allard, Somerville's fifteen-year-old "Knicker Bandit," was arraigned in Somerville Court today charged with assault with a deadly weapon. He was accused of assaulting Miss Gertrude Gutoskey of No. 63 Heath street, Somerville, with a club. The lad admitted he had been reading lurid novels and was attempting to emulate some of the western bad men. He was found guilty and his case placed on probation until next May on his promise to reimburse Miss Gutosky for medical expenses to the extent of $35.

HARVARD BASEBALL MAKEUP SURE TO SHOCK PREXY LOWELL

COLORED BOY ONE BEST BET FOR MOUND DUTY

By JOHN B. GILLOOLY,
Sporting Editor

Baseball is the next big card on the sporting program.

Ice hockey, basketball, boxing and the indoor meets are still in the running, but from beneath the snow-covered turf the great American pastime is forcing its way right into the limelight.

Major and minor leagues, colleges, schools, amateurs and semi-pros are all getting ready for a banner year, with each and every manager claiming the title for his charges.

John B. Gilooly

The big news of the week in diamond circles comes from fair Harvard, where everything points to a colored boy as leading candidate for pitching honors on the Crimson team—that is, if Harvard is to have a successful nine.

The news will come as a sad blow to President Lowell, but this is the situation: Harvard had three big varsity pitchers last season—Goode, Russell and Gehrke. The first two have graduated and the last has asked for a leave of absence until Fall.

The great boxman left is Eric Brown, a colored student, who hails from New York. He was one of the stars last year, but for various reasons was not used, in spite of the fact that he was available in the final battle with Yale at the Polo Grounds which the New Haven boys won.

Brown is the one best bet for the Crimson baseball first string pitcher, and it is a question whether Harvard will pass up the colored star and trail its rivals on the diamond or give the Dixie son a show and rank up near the top.

Jack Conway will give you all the inside dope on the fight game in his column, while Charley Parker, Nick Flatley, Fred Lane and Gus Daly will tell you all about the other branches of sport.

Willard shows flash of intelligence—Kotsonaros and Stacisak keep winning

By JACK CONWAY.
Boxing and Wrestling Editor.

Jess Willard, former world's heavyweight champion, has finally shown a flash of intelligence and agreed to box Floyd Johnson for the Milk Fund at the Yankees' ball park in May.

Jack Conway

Willard will get $25,000 for his services, which is a great deal more money than Jim Corbett received when he knocked out John L. Sullivan.

When Willard came East he demanded a match with Jack Dempsey for the championship. Of course he got the laugh. Jess is not entitled to a bout with Dempsey at this time. He must first prove to the public he is capable of giving "Tiger Jack" a battle.

Of course if Willard should defeat Floyd Johnson it will be difficult to deny him a contest with Dempsey. It is one thing for Willard to say he will knock out Johnson and another thing for him to accomplish the purpose.

Johnson is one of the most promising heavyweights in the world. He is a natural, two-handed fighter.

The fact that the bout will not be held until May will enable Willard to get into good condition for the match. He will go forth to action prepared to give the best that is in him. He will want to knock out Johnson if possible so as to emphasize his claim that he is the logical opponent for Dempsey.

Johnson, on the other hand, will strive to kayo Big Jess and thus prove he is the proper man to pit against the champion.

It will be difficult to name the winner, which will mean a great deal of interest in the bout. The gate receipts will run up around $250,000. As the profits will go to a noble charity, everybody will be satisfied.

* * *

Somebody interested in the welfare of Johnny Dundee flooded the New York newspapers with fake reports of the Dundee-Julian bout. They claimed that Dundee won and that he should have been awarded the decision. It was the opinion of virtually every unbiased person at the ringside that Julian had the better of eight out of the ten rounds. This writer gave Julian every round but the first.

Of course we realize that Dundee did not believe he had a difficult bout on his hands and so did not give the match the attention he should have, but this was his own fault and should not take away any of the credit to which Julian is rightfully entitled.

Dundee and Julian will probably meet again in the near future. The Scotch Wop will train carefully and enter the ring a favorite. All this, however, does not mean that he won't be defeated again.

* * *

George Kotsonaros, Greek champion, and Stanley Stacisak, Polish champion, continue to win. Kotsonaros says he can defeat John Pesek or George Calza. We are not so certain about Kotsonaros' ability to beat Pesek, but we believe he would have a chance of winning over Calza.

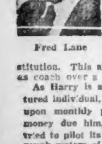
As for Stacisak, he is banging on the door of the Fall of Fame with both fists. He is already a dangerous rival for the famous Zbyszko brothers.

SCHOOLBOYS

Salem High enters the world of high finance

By FRED C. LANE.
Schoolboy Indoor Amateur Editor.

Possibly they have imported a large shipment of German marks at Salem. The high school of that city has hopped up on the sporting stage as it were and announced that it will pay Bill Broderick, former Haverhill High school coach, $5,000 as athletic coach. In case that Broderick will experience great contentment of mind the Salem High athletic authorities have promised to give him a percentage of the gate receipts of all post season games.



Fred Lane

When it was made known that Broderick was to assume the duties as coach, the Salem authorities did not state that Bill would be furnished with an array of legal talent which would assist him in collecting his $5,000 salary, bonus and other things.

Of course it may be that somebody has discovered a flock of gold mines in Salem. In the past, however, Salem High has not had a very bulky treasury.

Harry McDevitt, who was relieved of his duties as coach at Salem, is still owed $3,000 by that institution. This amount is money Salem High agreed to pay McDevitt as coach over a two-year period.

As Harry is a rather good natured individual, he did not insist upon monthly payments of the money due him, as Salem High tried to pilot its way through the rough waters of the sea of financial difficulties.

Inasmuch as Salem was unable to meet its financial obligations with McDevitt, it is a mystery from where it plans to get the money with which to pay Broderick.

It is possible that Salem will continue its merry flight into the realms of high finances by signing up Babe Ruth to take a post-graduate course so that he may win a baseball championship for the Witch City team.

In all probability they would not

DARTMOUTH CLEANS UP SPORTS EVENTS

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 10.—Dartmouth cleaned up in the athletic events on the card of the second day of the annual Winter carnival.

The ski and snowshoe events, in which McGill, New Hampshire State, and M. I. T. contested with the Green men were all won by Dartmouth with one exception.

The final score of the outdoor events was: Dartmouth 32½, McGill 13, New Hampshire State 4, M. I. T. ½.

The ski cross country race, over a course of seven miles, was done in 51.16, considered record breaking time.

Capturing all first and four second places, the Dartmouth swimming team defeated M. I. T. 52-16 in a dual meet.

BASEBALL

Both Boston Clubs Begin to Cut Loose Deadwood

By NICK FLATLEY.
Baseball Editor.

Both Boston clubs have apparently decided that no further material will be available for the 1923 campaign, and are now getting things in shape for the Southern pilgrimage. The Braves have let three rookies adrift, with the well-known string attached, while three of the Sox old-timers have been put on the market.

Nick Flatley

Owner Grant, who has a working agreement with the Worcester magnates, has sent Outfielder Roser and Infielder Gallagher to the centre of the Commonwealth for seasoning. These youths had enough actual playing last Fall to prove that they were not ready for the big show. They may come later, and they may develop more rapidly playing as regulars in the minors than they would decorating the cave at the Wigwam.

Roser looked like a pretty good hitter against right handers, but didn't show much speed in the garden. If he ever does come back, it will be because of his ability to bridge the onion. Little Gallagher was a flashy fielder, but he lacked the pep that one expects to see in an aspiring youngster. He may collect it under Eddie Eayrs, and if he does, he should have another shot at the large time.

Smith, the first baseman sent to New Orleans, was part of the trade for Henry, who will start in Hollke's old berth, and chances are we will hear no more of the boy with the popular name. He was hardly big enough for a first base job, anyhow.

Bennie Karr, Alan Russell and Nemo Liebold have been offered to Minneapolis, and will undoubtedly be parked somewhere in the big minors. All three have seen too much service in Boston, anyhow, and have little chance of ever setting the universe afire again.

Chance evidently intends to go through with his determination to manufacture an entirely new team for the Fenway. He would seem to have a tough row ahead, but he knows it, which is a whole lot in the battle.

Boston fans this year must wait for results. If the Braves can escape injuries, they have a chance to go forth with a pretty good team. If Chance can make his combination right he will have the gang with him. And there you are.

TRACK AND ICE HOCKEY

Joie Ray not likely to retire—B. A. A. and B. C. victories feature Ice Hockey

By CHARLES E. PARKER.
Club and College Sports Editor.

You may list these Joie Ray retirement stories as "the bunk." Joie may stand sponsor to them, but deep in the heart of Joie's heart there is not the slightest wish to retire until after the Paris Olympic games in 1924.

Charles E. Parker

Joie with his twelve-lap mile in less than 4:18, and his consistent trouncing of able foes is proving to the track world and to himself that he is traveling better than ever this year, and salted away in his in'ards is a desire to do to international foes what he repeatedly does to American distance runners. A bad leg prevented him from realising on this desire at Antwerp, so it is logical to believe Joie really is all keened up over the next Olympic meet and his chance to show the world.

Joie, Loren Murchison and Christiurnson continued at Newark this week the great work they have been doing in indoor track games all season. Joie from scratch won the handicap mile in less than 4:18; Murchison, with ease, captured the 50-yard, 60-yard and 70-yard dashes, and Christiurnson romped away with the 70-yard hurdles.

Their work at the Newark games and the completing of plans for the Harvard-Yale-Oxford-Cambridge quadrangular meet in England next Summer were this week's outstanding happenings in the field of track athletics.

In hockey the feature attractions were the meetings of Harvard and the B. A. A., and Boston College and Boston University. The Universities nosed out the Crimson in a close, exciting battle, while B. C., with its regular lineup working, proved by a one-sided victory that the B. U. sextet is not in the same class.

The entrance of the Wollaston Hockey Club to the Suburban Hockey League, and its prompt trouncing of Dorchester and Forest River by 5 to 0 and 3 to 0 scores, was the week's feature in local outdoor hockey.

NEW PLAYERS IN ARENA TWIN BILL TONIGHT

The Victorias and New Haven play a United States League game and Harvard matches its skill with the St. Nicholas team of New York in an attractive hockey double-header at the Arena tonight.

Boston will give the New Haven team a warm welcome when it takes the ice to start its battle for a place in the hockey sun. The great popularity of the Victorias will be challenged.

The Victorias face their hardest test. They are up against a team that is trying to regain its place in hockey.

The new men on the teams will catch the eye of the fans. New Haven will have Freddie Lowrey, the dashing 19-year-old youth, to flash on the local public, while the Vics will have popular Chick Williams in the forward line.

The Vics will use Charley Dougan in goal. This little fellow has been going great and it looks as though he had displaced Jiggs Donahue as the regular net keeper. Coach Stoke Doran is sweet on the kid, who is a student at the Tufts Dental School.

The Regina A. C. of Dorchester wants to book games away from home. Call 1479-R between 6 and 7 p. m.

HARRY LONDON TO REPLACE JOYCE

Teddy Joyce of Toronto has been forced to cancel his bout at the Casino A. C. of Lynn Monday night because of illness. Jack Murphy has secured Harry London of New York to replace Joyce and the fans should see a great bout.

London is a rip-tearing fighter and is known as the Crashing Cossack. He has met and held his own with the best bantams in the country and the Lynn club was lucky to get such a able substitute.

MANNING BOXES TO A DRAW WITH O'NEIL

Nashua, N. H., Feb. 10.—Bobby O'Neil and Jimmy Manning of South Boston went six rounds in the main bout at the Casino A. A. bouts at the Nashua Theatre to a draw.

K. O. Wallace of Nashua stopped Johnny Nelson of Lowell in the fourth round of a six-round bout.

MAROON AND GOLD TEAM WINS MEET

Boston College High won the track events of their dual meet with Dorchester, 57 to 21. The Maroon and Gold took four firsts to one of Dorchester and cleaned up in the dash and 600-yards run.

The summary:

45-Yard Dash—Won by Cadrian, B. C. H.; second, Whalen, B. C. H.; third, Murphy, B. C. H.; fourth, Welch, B. C. H.

HORSE RACING

Only one filly has ever won the Kentucky Derby since it was run first in 1875

By GUS DALY,
Horse Editor.

It will doubtless surprise many followers of the "thoroughbred" racer to know that since the first running of the Kentucky Derby in 1875 only once has this event been won by a filly; it remained for Regret in the Harry Payne Whitney stable to turn the trick in 1915.

Gus Daly

If history will repeat, this seems to be the year, for an exceptionally fine cluster of this sex are entered, including Sally's Alley, winner of the Futurity last Summer. She is owned by Willis Sharpe Kilmer, who is also the proud possessor of the iron horse, Exterminator, which won this classic a few years back.

Zev, Martindale, Bud Lerner, Donges, Enchantment (all colts) and Sally's Alley are the most talked of as choice for this event, which carries with it this year a value of $60,000, to be raced May 19, at Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky.

Prince Ti Ti, the highly bred three-year-old which raced so successfully for Moss Goldblatt at New Orleans, has been sold to John B. McKee, and will be raced at Tia Juana in the Derby, and the $30,000 Cofforth handicap. The price paid, according to reports, was $13,500 and $3,000 more if winner of either of the above events.

There are thirty-eight "Oral" merchants doing business at the fair grounds, the lowest number of the meeting. With the change in track conditions the first days of the week the talent were handed their usual shock: Tuesday Clarkson at twelve to one, Camouflage at ten, Eulalia at twenty-five, Tulalip at eight and Tulsa at ten to one all looked the judges first in the eye.

Max Hirch, Thomas Clark, Stephen Petitt and F. W. Gerhady were among the visitors who enjoyed the sport the past few days. Jockey Owens rode Sir Thomas Kean, Fantouche and Light Wine to victories last Wednesday.

Havana had another excellent week of the sport, with the nags racing very consistently.

Jockey F. Wilson (for a most serious offence) has been ruled off the turf for life.

E. R. Thomas and Captain I. E. May were interested spectators during the week.

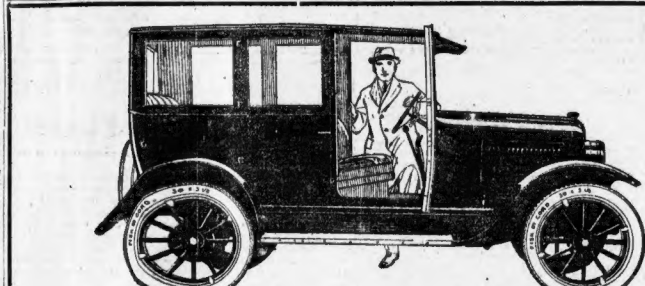
Tia Juana has had another six days of galloping through the mire and mud, with the accompanying upsets.

TONEY ALL DONE WITH BASEBALL

St. Louis, Feb. 10.—Fred Toney, right hand pitcher purchased from Boston last year by the St. Louis Nationals after he was traded by New York and refused to report at Boston, is through with baseball, according to word received today from Nashville, Tenn., his home, by Branch Rickey, manager of the Cardinals.

Fred Toney.

Rickey declared he had urged Toney, who is on the voluntarily retired list, to apply for reinstatement, but that the hurler ignored the request.



Where the Greater Value Is

YOU step into the driver's seat of your Overland without contortion. There is ample room between wheel and door-jamb.

You find standard controls—gear shift lever, three speeds forward and reverse, foot accelerator, as well as gas and spark at the wheel.

You ride in greater comfort because of the easy cradling of the Triplex Springs (Patented). It costs you less because of oversize tires, sturdy construction and a gasoline mileage of 25 and better.

You take greater pride in the longer lines, higher hood, lower seats, finer upholstery, and greater all-round beauty.

CHICAGOAN WILL LOSE BOUT WITH "BENNEH"

By Universal Service

New York, Feb. 10.—Rocky Kansas, the heavy-chested youth from Buffalo, came out on top in a fifteen-round engagement with Charley White of Chicago in Madison Square Garden.

Rocky was always the aggressor, full of pep, and shooting away with both hands, while White was generally inclined to wait for a chance to get over a knockout with his left hook. He never could Rock, was bounding around too much.

When the judges declared for Kansas, there were a lot of mad folk in the old Garden, for White had ruled a 5 to 2 and a 3 to 1 favorite.

Round after round, White persisted in his turtle tactics, waiting and waiting, and Kansas kept tearing up points. Several times Charley shook his head, once calling him to the canvas, but White was shaken up himself a few times.

Veteran Chicagoan Loses Bout With the Champion

It was a sad evening for the veteran Chicagoan. If lost a chance to meet Benny Leonard, Lightweight champion and furthermore, failed to make 135 pounds, as agreed, and thereby forfeited $2,500.

When White weighed in, he tipped 137¾ 12 ounces over. Kansas weighed 133.

As it was, White had to take off two pounds and this took quite a lot out of him. White did not put up his usual fight, but, all credit to the Kansas for the hard fight he put up every step of the journey.

MASON MAY HAVE EDGE AS A SHORT ENDER

By JACK CONWAY.

"These are the days of short enders," says Leo P. Flynn. "That's one of the reasons why Frankie Mason will win over Pancho Villa at the Arena A. C.'s show at Mechanics Building Tuesday night.

Boston has been a wonderful spot for the short-enders this year. Take a page out of the dope book and read this:

"Johnny Fox, on the short end of 10 to 3 betting, won over Steve Gustin.

"Tommy Nee, on the short end of 10 to 8 betting, upset Mike Castle.

"Dave Shade, on the short end of 10 to 8 betting, walloped Eddie Shevlin.

"Lou Paluso, on the short end of 10 to 6 betting, disposed of Red Chapman.

"Henry Ford, on the short end of 10 to 8 betting, won over Freddy Madden.

"Pete Latzo, on the short end of 10 to 3 betting, upset Paul Doyle.

"They [illegible] knocked the sport wo[illegible] Well over Johnny [illegible]

"It is apparent the short enders are [illegible] innings with a [illegible] If you had played the [illegible] in this year you wouldn't [illegible] what it is to get coal, [illegible] would now be at Miami or Cuba.

"Mason is a better short end bet than [illegible] of those who have come through with victories. The Fort Worth [illegible] and south still is the American flyweight champion.

"I always believed that the only way a boxer could [illegible] championship was when a match was at weight. The American flyweight limit is 112 pounds. Mason has never been defeated by a flyweight. When he lost a 15-round decision to Johnny Buff, he was weight at the bout was 118 pounds. Villa based his claim to the American flyweight championship to the fact he won over Buff.

* * *

"Frankie Genaro outpointed Villa in a no-decision bout in Jersey and won a decision over the Filipino at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn last August. This proves that Villa can be beaten. Genaro officiated Villa's wild swings by straight punching.

"I consider Mason a better boxer than either Villa or Genaro, Frankie, of course, cannot punch as hard as the Filipino, but a straight left jab will offset a wild right hand swing any time.

"Mason has been training for eight weeks and is in good condition. It will be a new experience for him to enter a ring with a flyweight. He has usually been obliged to battle bantamweights."

* * *

Mason is due to arrive in Boston tonight, and Villa will be in our midst Monday.

Despite the fact the American flyweight championship will be at stake Tuesday night the Arena A. C. announces that there will be popular prices for this show.

Seven Gustin of South Boston and Tony Leonard of the South End will [illegible] Tuesday. There will also be another eight-round bout.

Manty and Travers Are Fit for Hard Tussle

Young Manty, who claims the New England featherweight championship, and Mickey Travers of New Haven are in fine condition for their ten-round bout which will be staged under direction of the Armory A. A. at Mechanics Building Monday night. For a time it was feared that David Luminsky, manager of Chick Suggs, would stop the Tripple A's bout. Suggs had a prior contract for a bout with Manty. Luminsky asked for an injunction in the Taunton Superior Court, but later agreed to waive his petition when Manty signed to box Suggs at the Union Club in New Bedford on the afternoon of Washington's Birthday.

It was also brought out at the Taunton hearing that Monday night's tussle at the Armory Club will be at 130 pounds and that as a result the New England "feather" weight title will not be at stake.

Luminsky says it was impossible for Manty to lose his featherweight title to Al Shubert at New Bedford as the boys both weighed 131 pounds, six notches above the featherweight limit. Suggs' manager also had a statement from the Boxing Commission to the effect that Shubert weighed 134½ pounds when he battled Billy Murphy at Lawrence and that the latter scaled 131½ pounds.

* * *

The featherweight controversy has created interest in the appearance of Manty at the Tripple A's show. The New Bedford warrior has proved a sensation in his ring tussles and hopes not believe he has anything to fear from any featherweight in the East.

Ale Richardson informs us that Travers is in the best condition of his career and that he will hand Manty a rude jolt Monday night.

* * *

Joe Stanton of Cambridge and Frankie Manning of South Boston will box eight frames as will Harold Sullivan of South Boston and Willie Gore of the North End.

* * *

EXETER IN ANNUAL GAME WITH RIVALS

Exeter, N. H., Feb. 10.—Exeter's hockey team in its final workout before the tenth annual game with Andover, today worked well in spite of the fact that James and Pitman, two wings, are not in the best of condition. Coach Parker expects a hard game and thinks that if his players show the form they are capable of they should win.

Andover is banking on stopping "Jerry" Saracko of Exeter and Captain Hurley. Exeter's two fast men. The task is assigned to Captain Allison of Newton and Knight of Melrose, the Blues' fast forwards.

The two teams will be composed largely of former Boston interscholastic players: Zaracko of Cambridge, Cabot of Brookline, Rayner of Newton, MacPhail of Somerville, Captain Hardy of Arlington and Browne of Newton are on Exeter's list, and Knight of Melrose, Captain Ellison of Newton, Rogers of West Newton and Prior of Medford on Andover's.

Gold Skates Races Put Over; Indoor Meet Now Planned

Once again the weather has forced a postponement of the GOLD SKATES RACES.

With the more than 100 contestants ready for their best speed-skating efforts, and many thousands of skating enthusiasts preparing to witness the thrilling competition of the semi-final and final heats of Greater Boston's First Annual Ice Skating Derby, there came this morning's blizzard to ruin the program for the day.

This week conditions were somewhat the same as last, with excellent ice and weather conditions Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and assurance of the continuance of such good conditions Saturday. But last Saturday came rain and this Saturday came snow.

After two such experiences the GOLD SKATES EDITOR and those in charge of the GOLD SKATES RACES have become decidedly peeved at the weather man, and will not rely upon him again this season.

They have postponed the GOLD SKATES RACES until next Saturday, and are negotiating with George V. Brown, manager of the Boston Arena, for the use of that indoor ice palace on Saturday afternoon.

Conducted at the Arena, there will be no occasion for a further postponement, and Greater Boston's ambitious skaters will positively have their opportunity to win the attractive prizes.

CALZA SIGNED TO TAKE ON GIANT TURK

The Howard management, which has given the fans many wrestling sensations this season, will present a newcomer in Boston in the main event of their feature show at the Grand Opera House on Thursday night.

Ali Hassen, the Terrible Turk, will be the new mat sensation. He has a draw with Riecher to his credit as well as handicap decisions over Wladeck Zbyszko and other stars.

Hassin stands six feet, five and weighs 274 pounds. He is out with a challenge to meet any wrestler in the world. The fact that he isn't looking for soft ones is proved by the fact that he has selected George Calza, the Italian Champion, to meet him in Thursday's match.

The match will be to a positive finish.

Another match on the same card that will attract the fans will be between Joe Perelli, the Italian middleweight champion and Eddie Shaboo of the U. S. S. Florida. Shaboo is the welter and middleweight champion of the United States Navy.

The match between these boys has been hanging fire for some weeks. A few days ago Perelli challenged Shaboo to beat him in thirty minutes or forfeit the bout.

HANDICAPS TOO GREAT FOR CONNOLLY

By Universal Service.

New York, Feb. 10.—The liberal handicaps which Jimmy Connolly, Georgetown University and Boston speed merchant, gave a bunch of runners in the special handicap "1,000" at the Knights of St. Anthony games, proved too much for him, and he could only get fifth place.

The event went to J. W. Sweeney, with J. Lilly second and W. Hobichild. The time was 2:04.5. Connolly, from scratch, ran the distance in 2:04.5.

The suburban quarter, feature of the games, went to Walter Koppisch of Columbia, who nipped J. Tayl of Princeton, pacemaker most of the way near the tape. Jake Dr scoll Boston A. A. flyer, favored to win was third. The distance was run in 51 3-5s.

EAST BOSTON WHIRLWINDS

The East Boston Whirlwinds would like to arrange games with any 110-115 pound team in the State away from home any night except Friday. For games write to William J. Abare, No. 361 Meyer street, East Boston.

"Try To Hit It" The BULLSEYE By NICK FRATLEY

FRIENDS of about to be married couples are now giving 'em coal showers. The old-fashioned linen and tin showers are things of vanishing past. Giving coal nowadays is real token of esteem and respect. Sets youthful pair off on life's path in high. Couple with ton of coal in cellar has nothing to worry about.

Brides get their linen now adays in five and ten cent stores and all the tins they need wrapped around soup and spaghetti and mushrooms and things. Old time shower hound used to arm self with nickel pin plate, which was ticket of admission for chance to gargle plenty of ice cream and cake. Now a lump of coal entitles one to invade home of prospective, and assimilate as much home brew as the old gent will pass around. Dropping ton of coal on unsuspecting girl's shoulders likely to be shock but there will be plenty of those after she's married anyhow. Nothing like preparation. Nuts and pans drug on the home market these days but ton of coal is always collateral in case newlyweds haven't price of dinner plus couvert charge at joint factory. If they're serious about life, they can have their first little trying to make that coal burn. Bride can whisper to hubby that fire isn't the kind fathers used to make, and everything will get hot enough. If he feels put out about it, he can sue for divorce. Then they will live happily ever afterwards—till they get married again.

ST. MARK'S TO BATTLE RIVALS FROM QUINCY

St. Mark's Catholic Club basketball team will oppose the St. Joseph's A. C. of Quincy at the Dorchester High School gymnasium this evening. St. Mark's lost to St. Joseph's at Quincy, but expect to turn the tables at their home court. St. Mark's will use their regular lineup, with the exception of Martin, who met with an injury and will perhaps be out of the game for the season. The team will be captained by John McGonagle.

CHAMPION DESCRIBES HIS FINAL ROUND

By GENE SARAZEN.

I have been asked many times what my feelings and emotions were during that final round at Skokie. I suffered many, as one generally does when fighting for a championship.

Gene Sarazen

I started my last round in a good frame of mind and in a good position. I had overcome the terrible spell that I had suffered on the first nine holes of the third round, and my steady play on the homeward trip of that particular round buoyed up my spirits and confidence considerably.

I was like a person who had just recovered from illness.

Although I was four strokes back of John Black, the leader, and also was trailing Bobby Jones and Bill Mehlhorn, I was pugnacious nevertheless, because I felt I had something to fight for.

I would not have to worry about holding the lead and I could go for everything, inasmuch as there was everything to be gained and nothing to be lost.

I started my last round without much thought of championships or anything else. I was thinking only of my game. I got my par four at the first hole easily enough, but at the second hole, a par three, I caught a trap on my pitch and took a four. Not so good. At the next hole I ran down a good putt for a bird e three.

At the fourth hole I ran down another long putt for another bird three. Again lightly the thought of winning [illegible] popped into my mind.

As a result I [illegible] concentrated well on my next te[illegible] and took six for this fifth hole.

My start is not good a bit but I kept plugging to get my four on the sixth hole. I was back in the running again at the seventh where I dropped another putt for a birdie two. A par four at the eighth and a par three at the ninth gave me a 33 for the first nine holes.

Down the Stretch to the Championship

Johnny Farrell was quite as enthusiastic as I was. "Keep plugging now, Gene" he said "and you will win this tournament yet."

I had the same feeling and struck my tee shot at the tenth hole with all the power at my command. I played this shot perfectly but when it came up to the green I found that my ball had struck a hard spot and had bounded into a trap.

I took a five for the hole and figured that the championship had escaped my grasp.

A par four on the next hole restored my confidence somewhat and then I grabbed a birdie on the twelfth hole.

With the championship now in sight I decided to take no unnecessary chances and on the remaining holes I used my brassie in place of my driver for my tee shots. I lost a little distance in so doing, but I was able to keep the ball straighter.

I played the next five holes in par—played them as well as I knew how and without any mistakes.

I went into the clubhouse and sat down to await the results.

Eventually word came. It came in the form of a crowd which rushed into the locker-room shouting and slapping and which carried me high on its shoulders out to the clubhouse where I was handed the cup.

DORCHESTER ROMPS TO ANOTHER ICE VICTORY

There was little change in the standings of the City School Hockey League after their round of games at the Arena today. Dorchester High, leader of the league, tightened its grip on the top rung, defeating East Boston, 3 to 0. Commerce High, tied for second place with B. C. High and English, experienced no change in standing, beating West Roxbury, 2 to 1. B. C. High also held up its end, scoring a win over Trade School, 3 to 0. Brighton added another win to the lean column over Mechanic Arts, 2 to 0.

The Commerce-West Roxbury game was one of the best seen on the Ice this Winter. The game went into a overtime period when the Wes[illegible] Roxbury team played six man offensive hockey with Raymond cagging the puck in the closing minutes of the third session.

Bailey, the right wing on the Commerce team snatched victory from the fire in the overtime session with a speedy rush down the ice, scoring in a second and deciding goal of the day. The lineup:

COMMERCE		W. ROXBURY
Bailey, r.w.		l.w., Duffey
Coffey, c.		c., Raymond
Winterson, l.w.		r.w., Costello
	W. Norton
Tyrell, r.d.	l.d., Hogan, Lane
McCarthy, l.d.	r.d., Holstein
Armstrong, c., g.	Foley, McCusker

Boston College High played rings around Trade School scoring an easy 3 to 0 win. The forward line of the maroon and gold was too strong for the weak defence of Trade. Captain McGovern made a fine showing scoring all three goals. McGovern has also established himself on the Arena as this year and has all the marks of being the best forward man in scholastic circles. The lineup:

B. C. HIGH		TRADE
Burkley, r.w.		l.w., Littleton
McGovern, c.		c., Reilly
Watson, l.w.		r.w., Rankert
Cunningham, r.d.		l.d., Robinson

Mechanics Arts failed to show the stiff offense they has made it a feature of in the City League against Brighton today and lost 2 to 0. The contest was a slip shod affair that lacked interest. The lineup:

BRIGHTON		MECHANICS
Connor, r.w.		l.w., Burke
Nisspickles, c.		c., Moore
Mason, l.w.		r.w., Lane
Donovan, r.d.		l.d., Burke
Taylor, l.d.		r.d., Reed
McHugh, g.		g., Moore

Score—Brighton, 2; Mechanic Arts, 0 Goals—Donovan. Nusspickle. Referee—Hardigan.

The Dorchester High hockey team waltzed away to an easy win over East Boston. Three goals to none was the final show down in a loosely played game. At times Dorchester quickened the pace and on these occasions did they score. The lineup:

DORCHESTER		EAST BOSTON
Kontoff, r.w.		l.w., Clarke
Matson, Butler, c.		c., Leaman
Howard, Lw.		r.w., Benson
Goldfine, r.d.		l.d. Kirby
Maigles, Lincoln, l.d.		r.d., Aitken
Margolis, g.		g., Messer

Latin School showed spurts of its old form playing Hyde Park today and won 4 to 1. It was the best game Latin has played since that memorial contest with Brighton High. That the team is now traveling starts old chip is evident from the fight with which the players defend the old team work. The line-up.

LATIN.		HYDE PARK.
Schrug, Neale, r.w.		l.w., McGovern, Fellows
McGrath, c.		c., Walters
Sullivan, l.w.		r.w., Coscrove, Lennon
Norton, r.d.		l.d., Simpson
Silney, l.d.		r.d., Antonia, Healey
Harry, g.		g., R. Fellows

Referee—Hardigan.

CASEY BASKETBALL TEAMS ARE BILLED

The basketball followers will be treated to one of the fastest games this year when the Boston Council quintet will meet the Bunker Hill Council five at the Roxbury High school tonight.

The Bunker Hill five leads the Knights of Columbus League with Boston a close second. Despite the fact that the Charlestown quintet nosed out a victory at their first meeting close followers of the game favor Boston to win.

Bunker Hill.—Cofer, Tierney, Nangle, Norton, Thompson, Duffey and Dutch Holland.

JAN. 18—Well, diary, I gotta tellya bout today before I trot off to the kabaray ball. Some wild seshun. Altho I have been going round the block to disreguard ai vamp burglar Jess I met up with her safternoon. I believe she was layin in weight for me. Smatter of fack, I was going to brush by like she was invisable to me ween she up and stops me with a gestur like a traffic cop. Our conversation was bout as frenly as a' be ween a couple mitt fiters during the levanth round. Well, anyway we stood there a couple minuts lamping each other in silence. An then, I'll tell the world, we made it snippy. The follerin talk took place:

Her—I understan you ben goin round acusin me of burglin you outa Chet.

Me—An honest hart dont need no gumshoes. You know what you done. Bumpin seams to be worryin your head off.

Her—I no you gimme a kimono fer Crismus an we been chummy herevofore in the past, but I wont stan for annybody makin hiddyous cracks at me behin my back.

Her—Preps your referrin to Chet I dint take him away fum you, blondey I didnt hafta. He keep follerin me round. I didnt even hafta wistle. If you didnt have stuff pep to hold him wy blame me?

Me—Excuse me Miss Rafles, you dine everything keepf wiggle your ears at him. Think my lampe is defective.

Her—Beg your pardon but I dine nothin of the kind. He's ice and good lookin' but I wouldnt jump in the river fer him. Say blondey, the world is crowded with others. All you gotta do is follow the crowd an you'll see me in the lede. I don't hafta look 'em up a—tall a—tall.

Me—You hate yourself plenty, don't you? My, but you think you're the firemen peerade, don't you? You started this here talkfest and to avoid annythin' at mite ede to unpleasant words I'll fade away. It don't take long to find some skirts out. But take my advise and cut out the larseny.

So I left her standin there an' jazzed home to get ready for the big note which I hopes an' trus's sure will be fer Dotty. I'm trying to fergit her a few hours at the party is awful rare yet. Well ear, jazz and be merry tonite for theres more work tomorrer, Dotty O gee!

Remember the Time—

By Jack Casey

YER Ma said smelts was little fishes in the brook an' every time yer had 'em for dinner yer Ma would sing the song, "Little fishes in the brook. Papa caught 'em with a hook, Ma frys 'em in the pan; Johnny eats 'em all he can." An' yer loved 'em. Still yer felt sorry for 'em because they was such pretty little fishes.

An' nobody had ever heard of a flapper an' when yer wore goloshes yer buckled 'em tight an' didn't let 'em flop in the wind. An' skirts was so long they trailed an' a girl always wore a big silk sash with her Sunday dress an' yer thought yer Pa looked wonderful in his Sunday detachable cuffs an' his big four-in-hand tie with a pearl in it.

The kangaroo walk was famous an' all the girls walked that way an' the older women thought it was scandalous. An' when women wore pads to make their hips look big an' when the girl down stairs got home from E. S. Brown's store where she worked she used to play the piano an' yer loved it so yer used to sneak out on the front stairs an' sit an' listen till she stopped. An' the tune yer loved best was "Jingle Bells."

Ball players wore mustaches. An' the catcher stood away back o' the plate an' got the ball on the bounce. An' the first baseman didn't wear no mitt an' neither did the fielders.

An' there was only one umpire an' he stood behind the pitcher an' was chased off the field by the home fans if he gave a close decision an' the visitin' team won. An' the grandstand had a screen all over it an' it used to bother yer eyes an' make yer head ache. An' yer ambition was to be a peanut butcher an' see the games for nothin'.

Yer learned how to dance in the cellar with a broom. An' the only dances was the waltz an' two step. An' the daily papers didn't have funny pages or sport pages. An' hard candy was ten cents a pound an' yer always spent yer nickel spendin' money on half a pound on Sundays an' would never forget to bring home some to yer Ma.

REMEMBER?
I'LL SAY YOU DO.

MONOLOGUES

By L. W.

IS Bill a friend of mine? Ask me!
Why I've known Bill ever since
His mother used to grab him by the slack of
His rompers and give him the paddywhacks
For makin' faces at his grandmother
Want to tell you about Bill—
Got a heart that's oversize and in the right
Guess Bill stopped thinkin' back in '96
And is too stubborn to start again
Tried to tell him the other day that
His wife and sister — well — I won't go
Into that. Leave the women out of it,
I say. However, Bill's a grand old
Piece of work, and I'll wallop
That says he ain't all to the good.
Only real fault about good old Bill
Is the way he pans his friends
Behind their backs.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

A NEW club has been formed in the West called the "De Luxe Loafers' Association, Inc." This organization is composed mostly of married men because anybody who works can't get in.

THEIR board of managers has gone to Washington to try and lengthen the days so that their members will have more time to loaf.

THE object of the members is to do nothing and to take as long as possible to do it.

THEY have no president or secretary, because the members in this club are so lazy they don't even make any motions.

MOST of them never exert themselves in any way and it was impossible for the International News Reel to take moving pictures of them.

ONE guy was on the floor grovelling, he was sitting on a nail and too lazy to get up.

ANOTHER bird was standing up against the wall fast asleep. He was too tired to lie down.

THIS club has no telephone in its headquarters because not a single member of the organization would have ambition enough to answer it.

THE founder of the club is planning to hire a mind reader because most of his fellow loafers are even too lazy to think.

THEY even brush their hair straight back so that they won't have anything on their mind.

ONE bird was so lazy that he sent a friend of his to the theatre to see "When Knighthood Was in Flower" for him.

HE figured that anything that moved might have a bad influence on him.

ANOTHER one of these birds was too lazy to raise a family so he married a widow with six children.

WHEN she quit her job at the laundry he was good and sore but he overlooked it because he didn't have ambition enough to sue her for divorce.

HE knew that he'd have to get up on the witness stand and swear and it was against his rules even to open his mouth except to put food into it.

HE opened his mouth one morning and it stayed open for three days, he was too lazy to close it.

AT one time the doctors kept him alive for six weeks with oxygen, he wouldn't take the trouble to breathe.

OF course, there are some loafers who don't belong to this organization, a few of them are even too lazy to join.

Hello, Cinders. What do you know?

Not much.

Got any jokes?

A few.

All right, shoot.

"Samson, he had a close shave when he lost his cue, but his last act brought down the house."

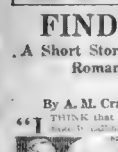
FINDING BLUEBIRD

A Short Story of a Young Girl Who Bore the Romantic Name of Elaine and Tried to Live Up to It.

By A. M. Crawford.



"I THINK that I made a mistake [illegible] name Elaine," said [illegible] her husband [illegible] year [illegible] night. [illegible] name [illegible] romantic sound and you try to live up to it. Now if you [illegible] a sensible girl you'd go right ahead and marry Clem Caldwell. He's MY STODGY'S DAUGHTER MEANS AN END TO TWO BLACKEYED PEAS [illegible] Perdue well for [illegible]

"Oh, the road to thirty and is still unattached—" Elaine smiled faintly, a bit wistfully but her practical mother did not notice. "Old enough to exercise good common sense about marriage," the mother went right on. "A girl always has her best chances before she is twenty-five. After that she gets a 'title' and ways, begins to find faults and criticize men — my goodness, daughter, men are as like as [illegible]-eyed peas."

"Just the same" said Elaine patiently, "I am going to [illegible] for a thrill. It won't hurt to look and expect it will be."

"Here I am talking [illegible] going to hang on forever. He's the kind of [illegible] down early in [illegible] influential citizen and if [illegible] so is elected an elder in the church. He's the kind that wants a good wife and a family."

Elaine looked down at the towel she was embroidering. Every afternoon when she came home from school, where she taught the eighth grade in high, she allowed herself a brief hour of sewing on the pretty things she had been painstakingly accumulating for years. And during that hour she usually sat alone and indulged herself in the happiest of day dreams.

Clem Caldwell had carried her books and notes to her age she just a kid. He had been her avowed beau ever since she could remember.

A Visit of Charity.

Elaine carefully picked up the threads that she had dropped on the rug, folded up her little sewing basket that held a wealth of dreams for her and rose slowly from her [illegible] rocking chair. "I'm going to [illegible] coat now, mother, and walk up to ask about Jennie Barnes. He hasn't been able to [illegible] school."

"You carry [illegible] glass of quince jelly [illegible] little Jennie, he'll never be strong [illegible] child," [illegible] "I do wish it were [illegible] could soon [illegible] at least back of his. I heard that one of the local doctors thought he could be cured in the East, only he [illegible] so poor, he just can't afford it."

There were signs of activity about Johnny's humble home. Two automobiles, one of them bearing another State license tag, were parked outside. In real alarm, Elaine hurried up the rickety steps. One of Johnny's close neighbors met her and drew her inside the door. A tall, distinguished looking man was washing his hands in a bowl in the front room.

When he was presented to Elaine he quickly wiped his hands dry and came forward smilingly. Elaine felt great pleasure and a bit of awe [illegible] when she found that he was the famous surgeon, Dr. Perdue who had come [illegible] to see Johnny.

He told her that he had just operated on Johnny and that soon the little boy would be able to run and play and be as active as any other child. Dr. Perdue was so [illegible] and [illegible] that Elaine grew [illegible] at once.

Later, when she rose to go, he quickly asked if he might have the pleasure of driving her home in his car.

How It Happened.

A man was lingering by the gate and when Elaine looked up and saw Clem Caldwell, she felt no surprise, just the comfort she always knew when Clem was near.

Johnny was worse yesterday, but he has never been," Clem told her. "I sat up there last night and I—I couldn't bear to see the little chap suffer so—I kept thinking [illegible] were mine. So I sent for Perdue, Elaine."

"You did it—for me?" Elaine felt her long expected thrill at last. She thought of the pinched, white little face and the poor twisted little back. Thought of the boy's eagerness to learn, his courage in trying to overcome his physical handicap.

And now Johnny was going to be well and walk and run like other children. And Clem, the steady going, unemotional pal of a lifetime had brought the miracle to pass. Tears suddenly brimmed over and ran, unheeded, down her cheeks. She laid her hand on Clem's arm and held it close.

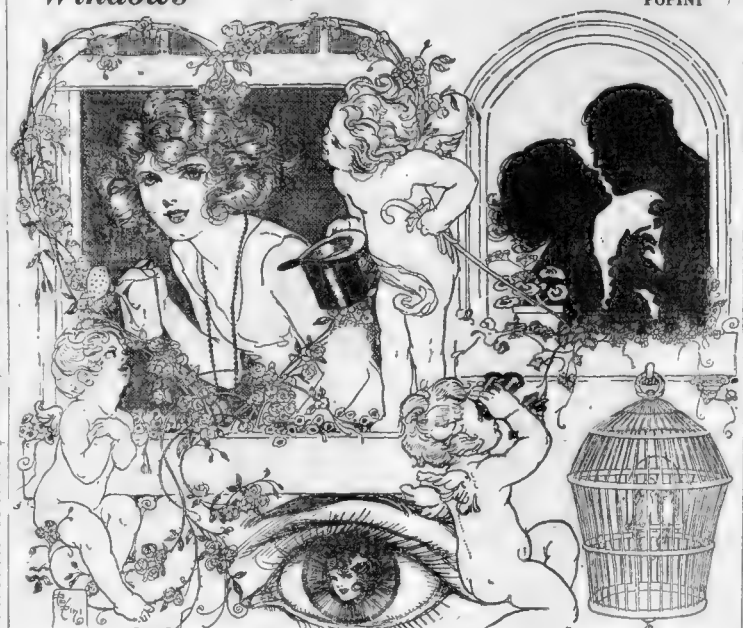
Elaine smiled through her tears. The blue bird of happiness had been hanging unheard beside her door all the time. And suddenly she knew her lips against his, that together they had at last set their feet on flowering paths of dreams.

Windows

DRAWN BY POPINI



Copyright, 1923, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

WHAT wondrous things windows disclose—both when you look out and when you look IN.

There's the window round which Cupids seem to have trained vines to climb in the form of a heart—in which SHE most appropriately appears, on the pretext of watering flowers, but in reality to watch for HIM.

Then, there's the window—neath which two love-birds swing in a beautiful cage, making love all day long—ah, in the window, no matter how close may be drawn the shade, a silhouette may sometimes be glimpsed——

But what more wondrous window can be seen in all the world than that which so aptly has been called "the window of the soul" As the Italians say, "Each eye makes its own beauty"—Ah, what could be more soul revealing than the picture in the eye of him who bears within his heart the image of his love?

—POPINI.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Anne Told Carlotta With Firmness That Henceforth Betty's Apartments Would Be Her Headquarters, Though She Could Not Say "Home"

By Ann Lisle

"CARLOTTA," I protested. "You're morbid. It's bad enough for Tony to be, but if you're going to be silly, too, don't you see the evil you're going to create?"

"Let's not talk about me," said Carlotta, starting into my face with something like hostility in the deep eyes that gazed over the rim of her coffee cup. "Tell me what kind of a time you had last night."

"I didn't go," I said, knowing that the time had come to tell Carlotta what her mood was making it so hard to convey.

"LET'S NOT TALK ABOUT ME," SAID CARLOTTA, STARING INTO MY FACE. ~

"You didn't go? But you said"——

"I said what I felt I had to say to insure you the evening with Tony," I replied.

"So that was it." Carlotta murmured as if to herself, and I noted how peculiarly she smiled at her own bitterness—"mine. Then she added, in a voice noticeably softer and gentler than her previous tones had been. "You were ready to juggle the truth that is always so precious to you and to put yourself in a very peculiar position to assure me the evening with Tony. I call that very friendly of you, Anne. Well, what did you do?"

"I spent the evening with Betty," I replied.

"How did you manage Ralph Lacy?" demanded Carlotta suddenly.

"I told him that Betty was upstairs and that I couldn't bear to leave her alone. He'd been given one glimpse of her and had a notion of Tony's sense of responsibility where she's concerned. So he had no trouble in recognizing that good old Tony would sacrifice his evening to save me."

"They don't include you, dear. Don't you see how careful I'd be to make sure they didn't include you?" I pleaded. "I put the whole thing to Mr. Lacy in terms of Betty's calling in actual need of me—and I'm going to show you how true that is—in a minute. I counted on the chivalry that both Mr. Lacy and Tony possess. Only I choose to take advantage of Mr. Lacy's kindness and not Tony. That gave you your evening and gave Betty me."——

"Let's not talk about Betty, either," said Carlotta, grimly. But it did not give me a thing. If Tony had known you were staying home with Betty it might have been different. As it was"——

"As it was," I interrupted, "you got in touch with a fact I believe it is salient for you to remember—Tony has a sense of responsibility where Betty's concerned. She is a friend in need and the wife of a dead comrade. The more she needs him the more he'll feel free to live his own life. You must see that, Carlotta! Say you do—before I go on."

"Before you go on with what?" demanded Carlotta eagerly. "Oh, Anne, this is all such torture to me. I feel so humbled and belittled and miserable. I can't think straight or see straight or believe I'm ever going to be happy. I've never really wanted any other man. And everything was going so happily for us until Peg stepped in and spoiled it all for me. If I hadn't you I don't believe I could bear it."

Then I took my courage firmly in my two hands and, gripping my belief in the rightness of the necessity which I was going to drive even as it had been driving me, I said:

"Carlotta, I stayed with Betty Winston last night. I came home early so I could tell you rather than have you hunt—find out."

Facing the battery of her wide, questioning eyes, I said:

With all the grip I'd taken on my determination, I found I could not suggest to Carlotta that Betty's apartment could be "home" to me.

"I couldn't have understood you!" gasped Carlotta after a stunned moment of silence. "You didn't really say that you were go ing to stay at Betty's—to live to make your home with Betty Winston. That would be the last straw!"

She sneered a laugh, but didn't make much of a success of it. However, it suggested the note on which I should pitch my reply.

"You didn't understand me, dear," I answered. "I only intended making [illegible] arrangements with Betty."

"Don't quibble," said Carlotta wearily, settling to her feet and standing crumpling her napkin. "You've decided to go and live with Betty Winston. Her coming into my life seems to have taken everything from me. There's nothing I can say——"

"Carlotta," I protested, going to her and managing to gather up her hands in mine. "You can't think that I want to go. I don't like the appearance of being a wait and stray camping out on one door-step after another——"

"You were welcome here. You made it impossible for me to go on living here. I thought you felt this was your home—that you'd stay until I came back. I never thought of anything else. Not ones."

"Why I," I said softly.

"Then why change?"

STAR DISTANCES

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

"I was much impressed by one of your articles regarding the distance of the farthest known star, which was stated to be 600 000 trillions of miles. In an effort to realize what these figures mean in comparative distance, I imagined a map drawn to scale, which would show the earth the sun and the star. The comparative distance shown in this way are so enormous as to lead me to believe that my calculation is incorrect, or else there was an error in printing the article.

"Here is what my imaginary map shows:

"Distance from earth to sun, 1 inch. Sun 1400 inch in diameter; earth 1/10,000 inch; moon 1/27,000 inch.

"Six hundred and sixty thousand trillion miles equal 660,000,000 feet, or 125,000 miles, on the map!

"To show the whole width of the universe on the map, on which the distance between the two ends of the earth was one inch, would have to be 250,000 miles wide—is this possible?—W. J. A., Wakefield, Mass."

YOUR calculation, in which you have used only rounded figures, is correct. There is really no error in the statement of the distance given in the article. Your map would really reach beyond the moon. To bring it down to a width of only a mile its scale would have to be so reduced that a billion miles would be represented by 1.25-000th of an inch.

But the known universe is even larger than you suppose. The object referred to in the article of which you speak is the Great Magellanic Cloud, a sister of our own Milky Way, visible in the southern hemisphere. But much more distant objects are known, the most remote of which is a globular star cluster in the northern constellation Delphinus, known to astronomers as "N. G. C. 7006."

This cluster is about twice as far away as the Magellanic Cloud. We may call its distance 1,200,000 trillion of miles. Light, which travels nearly six trillion miles in a year, takes more than 200,000 years to cross the abyss between the stars of "N. G. C. 7006" and the earth.

It is perhaps a mistake to insist too much upon using terrestrial standards of measurement in trying to visualize the distances dealt with in astronomy. There is, however, one possible advantage to be gained by it—that such efforts not only convince us of the extreme relative insignificance of the earth, and even of mankind with the universe as a whole, but they also suggest to at least some of us the probability that we entertain exceedingly exaggerated notions of our personal importance in the universal scheme. It is well to add a dash of humble pie to the feast when we foregather to "celebrate ourselves."

LAND O' DREAMS

NEW SERIES BY NOTED PSYCHO-ANALYST

By Hereward Carrington, Ph. D.

NIGHTMARES are probably among the most dreaded of childhood's experiences, and even adults are occasionally subject to them. Very frequently the same nightmare will recur again and again, for years, and will only be outgrown with the oncoming of adolescence.

The writer, for instance, had the same nightmare for years, when a small child. He dreamed that he was playing on the sands, by the sea, with his sister and nurse, and a witch, riding upon a broomstick would suddenly appear in the sky, soar down upon him, grasp him and carry him off with her into the sky. When there, she would drop him into the red-hot world awaiting her, but as he touched the water. This nightmare continued on and off until the eighth or ninth year.

Nightmares are of various kinds, and vary greatly in intensity. Usually we are either falling from a great height, or are being pursued by some terrible creature or are being tortured, or burned alive, or drowned, or are about to be eaten by cannibals, etc. In other words, our nightly terrors are to a great extent the very things of which we should be afraid in the daytime.

The older theory of nightmare was that it was due to too much food, or an indigestible meal too late at night, or sleeping on the back, etc.

These older views are, however, largely given up, nowadays, in favor of "psychological" theories. These are based upon the belief that a dream, being a mental thing, is due to mental causes and not physical ones.

Mental conflicts are responsible for many nightmares. We strongly desire to do a certain thing, but we know that we must not, and we "repress" the idea. It is not really put out of the mind, but out of the conscious mind—and into the sub-conscious. There it stays, and we dwell upon it and brood about it. A sort of battle or "conflict" is thus created within ourselves, and this gives rise to nightmares. A part of the battle going on within us.

The prevention of nightmare is often a difficult problem. If the cause is physical, it should be corrected. Late meals should be abolished, and the patient should avoid sleeping upon his back. However, many persons continue to have nightmares, no matter in what position they may be lying.

In such cases, the origin of the trouble is undoubtedly mental, and reliable treatment should be taken. The cause of the mental trouble should be discovered, and this can only be done by psycho-analysis, or by exploring the subconscious mind, in order to discover the hidden fear or conflict within.

Only the best thoughts should be entertained just before going to sleep. If you are thinking strong and beautiful thoughts when you fall asleep, you will seldom have nightmare!

Apple Amber Pudding

Line the edge of a pie dish (deep one) with thin strips of good paste about 3 inches wide and decorate the edge with small rounds of pastry which must be securely fixed by means of white of egg. Peel and slice 6 large apples, stew them gently with 2 ounces of butter, 3 ounces of sugar and rind of 1 lemon until tender. Pass through a fine sieve and add the yolks of 3 eggs. Pour the mixture into the deep pie dish, bake gently for 20 minutes, then pile the stiffly-whisked white of eggs on the top. Dredge liberally with powdered sugar, decorate with cherries and a few strips of angelica and replace in oven until the whites of eggs harden and acquire a little color. Serve either hot or cold.

Chocolate Bread Pudding

One cup bread crumbs in a buttered baking dish. Scald 2 cups of milk. Melt 1 square of chocolate or use 2 teaspoons of cocoa and add to milk. Then pour over crumbs. Allow the crumbs to soak until soft. Add ½ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 egg beaten light and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Bake in a moderate oven until the pudding is firm and brown on top. Allow about 35 minutes for baking. Serve with plain or hard sauce.

A Russian Prince of Fabulous Wealth and Some Friends Bind Themselves to Bar All Women From Lives

Prince Michael Fedor, a Russian of fabulous wealth, is at Monte Carlo while the great war is on. With him is his friend, Attilo Castro, and other acquaintances. The prince, on returning to Villa Sirena, finds everything changed owing to the war. He announces, to the amazement of his hearers, that he is ruined. Castro smilingly remarks that he would be content with one-tenth of the remains. The Prince proposes that Castro and a few of their friends live together with the proviso that no women shall enter their lives. They will be known as "The Enemies of Women." Castro tells the Prince he has seen the Duchess de Delille. The Prince says he will not receive her. The story reverts to the marriage of the Prince's father and mother and the son's early training. His father dies and his mother marries again. Her new sister-in-law has a small daughter, Alicia. They come to Paris to live. Alicia fights with Michael, who returns to Russia and takes up military training.

By Vicente Blasco Ibanez,
Author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and Other Novels of World Renown.

A PLAIN old lampstand, which looked as though it might have walked up stairs by itself from the concierge's quarters, was jumping about and rapping at all hours in the bedroom of the Princess, conjuring up historic phantoms that moved the carpets, made the pictures fall from the walls, changed the positions of the chairs and committed other childish depredations to prove their silent presence. The Princess was convinced that she herself was the reincarnation of Marie Stuart.

Dona Mercedes, Michael found, avoided visiting her old friend the Princess. Her simple faith caused her to be frightened at queens that last for centuries, and at those halls with old furniture that seemed to palpitate with mysterious life. But Michael Fedor saw Alicia twice in the Lubimoff palace. She had married a Frenchman, the Duke de Delille, who was twenty years her senior, and after a few months' marriage had gotten herself much talked about.

Alicia did not feel there the same uneasiness as her mother experienced, and even declared the manias of the Princess very original and interesting. Afternoons when she was bored, and paid the Princess a visit, she too seemed to believe in the lamp table and the protegee with their mystic gestures.

Alicia, too, consulted them to find out whether she would be happy, and especially if she would be greatly loved, though she never told who it was that was supposed to love her. On other occasions she asked the oracle, with jealous anxiety in her voice, what a certain unknown person was doing at that particular time. The name of the person was kept secret, but some months he was dark and others he was blond. She and the lamp table understood each other perfectly.

"I always said that girl was cleverer than her mother," the Princess affirmed.

A Clever Girl

"Do you remember how we used to hate each other? Do you remember the day in the Bois when we whipped each other?"

She looked at him with an air of interest, scrutinizing him from head to heal without observing anything of the displeasing youth of former times. She knew of his adventures in Russia, his loves, his duels, his expulsion. An interesting man! . . . Byronic fellow! Besides, she had heard that he was a bit of a brute with women.

"Come and see me. We must be friends. Remember we are related."

The little rider of their youthful morning gallops had developed into a woman of superb beauty. Michael was reminded of a California fruit, golden, gleaming, wafting a strong, sweet fragrance.

Inwardly he wavered, as he met the gaze of those dark eyes, enticing, provoking, fascinating, and commanding, sure of their power.

But no. He remembered various men whom he disliked, and who according to common gossip had preceded him.

Besides, he suddenly beheld her again in his imagination as she was years before. Perhaps she had not changed. She was used to managing men with a firm hand, to changing from one to another, as though they were posthorses.

At their second meeting they quarreled. They might have ended by coming to blows. He saw no more of her. New preoccupations changed the tenor of his thoughts.

The Geography of Love

In England Michael purchased a sailing yacht, with a sharp bow, bold masts and an auxiliary engine, and gave it the name of a seabird, the gull, in Spanish "Gaviotta." The voyages of the Gaviotta lasted for five years.

"I am making a study of the geography of love," the Prince wrote Don Marcos, after inquiring about his mother's health.

And meanwhile the poor mad Princess, now "Marie Stuart," to herself, absolutely incognito to others, went from one large hotel to another, occupying an entire floor with her retinue of much-beaten Russian servants, with her soothsayers and witch-doctors, the despair of the hotelkeepers, who were always glad to see her depart, in spite of the fact that she alone paid more than all of the other guests put together.

It was in upper Norway on his return from an expedition to the Arctic Ocean that Prince Michael received the sad expected news. His mother had died:

Michael arrived in time to receive the body of the Princess in Paris. During the funeral ceremonies, Michael Fedor met again many persons who formerly visited the Lubimoff Palace and whom he had thought were dead. Dona Mercedes embraced him weeping and the Duchess de Delille also came forward to meet him, taking both his hands and giving him a strange glance.

"Your mother really loved me," said Alicia. "During these last years we saw each other very often. She loved me more than my own mother. . . . Perhaps, she had it in her mind that I ought to have been her daughter.

The Prince walked away, as though annoyed by this allusion. He had heard such disquieting things about her. All during the ceremony he nevertheless kept seeing her in his mind's eye. She was still beautiful, but so strangely beautiful. Her skin had lost the golden tinge of ripened fruit, and took on the dull white of Japanese paper.

Her large eyes, which gave off green and yellow glints, stared with disturbing fixity and seemed at the same time to have a blank expression, as though covered by an invisible spider web. Her least bitter enemies accused her of a certain propensity for spirits.

She drank all sorts of American mixed drinks like an habitue of the bars. Other people attributed her pallor and the continual dark-ly bewildered look in her eyes to the various liquids and perfumes procuring lethargy and creating "artificial paradise." Alicia of former years was apparently draining the cup of life in deep draughts, draining it to the last drop.

Michael Fedor thought that he had seen the last of her, but a few days later he began to receive letters. He was alone, and must be feeling sad, so she was inviting him to come and seat with her informally like the relatives they were. His excuses brought fresh invitations by telephone. The Prince, like a person fulfilling a tiresome social obligation, finally went one evening to her little palace in the Avenue du Bois, one of the numerous imitations of Petit Trianon, which are to be found in various parts of the world.

A Strange Life

People's comments had kept him informed of Alicia's strange life. She had suddenly been taken with the mad desire of seeing people and being admired, of astonishing every one by her prodigality. She even gave a series of great fetes, lamenting the fact that the municipality of Paris would not allow her to illuminate the entire Champs Elysees and the Arc de Triomphe, so that her guests might ride up to her very door in a fiery apotheosis.

Suddenly she would disappear, and people would wink and make malicious comments on her secrecy. Come now love affairs and here were nearly always wandering fancies, demanding long trips and new horizons. Perhaps she was in Constantinople or in Egypt; perhaps she was hiding in one of the large New York hotels.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

Be Sure to Read Them to Your Children

By Blanche Silver

The Puzzled Little Dragon-Fly.

"OH, me!" sighed the little water-boy. "I feel dreadful. I just can't seem to get enough air. Doesn't it seem stuffy to you today?" he inquired of his neighbor, Croaker Green Frog.

"What! Stuffy—under this lovely, clear water? Why, I should say not," croaked his neighbor. "Who ever heard of cool water being stuffy? But maybe if you'd crawl up into the sunlight for a few seconds you'd feel better. When I get restless I usually go up on the bank for a while." And away Croaker Green Frog hopped out of the water to the mossy bank.

The little water-boy watched the water where his neighbor had disappeared. Then a thought popped into his funny little head, and he swam over to a swaying weed and crawled up the stem into the sunshine.

Two weeds grew close together, and the little water-boy fastened the hooks on his feet into them and swung his little body between them. He felt so queerly he would have cried if Tilly Turtle hadn't been so near him. He began to twist and squirm, all the time, trying to smile as Tilly Turtle would not think him a baby. But he did feel strangely queer. His little back seemed to tremble. Then a funny thing happened. The little water-boy's suit ripped right straight down the back.

He tried to laugh, but he felt so badly he couldn't. And Tilly Turtle, seeing his embarrassment, acted as though she didn't see his ripped suit.

Then another strange thing happened. The little water-boy gave a big gasp, and out of his funny little suit he came. He was terribly excited, and there's no telling what might have happened if Tilly Turtle hadn't glanced his way.

"Why, my dear," she cried, jumping over, to the very edge of the log. "You have another lovely suit under the one you just took off. Did you ever in all your life! Yes, sir, as true as I'm alive, you're a dragon-fly."

"Wings dry!" exclaimed the little newly made dragon-fly. "Have I really and truly beautiful wings?" He glanced down at his reflection in the pond and laughed with joy. Sure enough he had crawled right out of his ugly old suit into another lovely one. But, oh, how tired and ill he felt. He could hardly move. It took all Tilly Turtle could do to get him to try those wings.

"You've got the chance of your life to see the world now," she told him. "Don't sit there like a dummy or some bird may eat you. Try your wings. Fly!"

Dragon-fly didn't know what a bird was, but he was so happy he didn't care to be eaten. So he spread his lovely wings and sailed away.

DAILY HOROSCOPE

Elsa Allen Says:

Today is Lucky If You Have FORTITUDE

IF today is the anniversary of your birth, you should be a lovable character. You are an inveterate optimist. For you the cloud has always a silver lining, and a certain amount of your time will be spent looking for the bright side of things.

You will suffer endless disappointments because of your optimism; but you will surmount them with your fortitude. A married life is the only one you will completely enjoy.

Today is one of extreme good fortune for you in all personal undertakings. Devote the entire day, if possible, to straightening out you own affairs.

The ensuing year will bring you innumerable disappointments. If unmarried you will contemplate matrimony, but you should postpone it until the sign of Capricorn, December 21st to January 20th.

A child born today will be powerful in mind and body, but subject to nervous disorders.

Coue's Book

SELF MASTERY Through Conscious AUTOSUGGESTION

Only Authorized Book by EMILE COUE

Everyone has heard of somnambulism; everyone knows that a somnambulist gets up at night without waking, leaves his room after either dressing himself or not, goes downstairs, walks along corridors, and after having executed certain acts or accomplished certain work, returns to his room, goes to bed again, and shows next day the greatest astonishment at finding work finished which he had left unfinished the day before.

It is, however, he himself who has done it without being aware of it. What force has his body obeyed if it is not an unconscious force, in fact his unconscious self?

Let us now examine the alas, too frequent case of a drunkard attacked by delirium tremens. As though seized with madness he picks up the nearest weapon, knife, hammer, or hatchet, as the case may be, and strikes furiously those who are unlucky enough to be in his vicinity. Once the attack is over, he recovers his senses and contemplates with horror the scene of carnage around him, without realizing that he himself is the author of it. Here again is it not the unconscious self which has caused the unhappy man to act in this way?*

If we compare the conscious with the unconscious self we see that the conscious self is often possessed of a very unreliable memory, while the unconscious self on the contrary is provided with a marvelous and impeccable memory which registers without our knowledge the smallest events, the least important acts of our existence. Further, it is credulous and accepts with unreasoning docility what it is told. Thus, as it is the unconscious that is responsible for the functioning of all our organs by the intermediary of the brain, a result is produced which may seem rather paradoxical to you: that is, if it believes that a certain organ functions well or ill or that we feel such and such an impression, the organ in question does indeed function well or ill, or we do feel that impression.

Not only does the unconscious self preside over the functions of our organism, but also over all our actions whatever they are. It is this that we call imagination, and it is this which, contrary to accepted opinion, always makes us act even, and above all, against our will when there is antagonism between these two forces.

"And what aversions, what ills we create for ourselves, everyone of us and in every domain by not "immediately bringing into play "good conscious auto-suggestions" against our "bad unconscious auto-suggestions," thus bringing about the disappearance of all unjust suffering.

ETIQUETTE POINTERS

By Ann Adams

DEAR MISS ADAMS:

At the theatre is it correct for the young lady to lead the way down the aisle to the seats? Also in leaving, is it proper for the young man to push back his seat for the lady to pass into the aisle first?

WANT TO KNOW.

In the modern theatre the ushers are so efficient that there is no reason why the lady should not follow the usher with the gentleman in the rear. However, some punctilious ladies insist on preceding the lady, their idea being to see that the lady is taken to the proper seat with the least possible confusion. The gentleman will always clear the way for the lady to step out into the aisle.

RESULT OF VOTE ON "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

The vote on whether or not to stop the serial, "When a Girl Marries," resulted in a near tie. While 27 voted to continue 33 voted to stop. Of these latter, several liked the story, but thought it had run long enough. The matter will be taken under advisement.—Ed. Magazine Page.

ATTRACTIVE NEGLIGEE

By Rita Stuyvesant

WHAT is more cheery in cold weather than lounging robes, kimonos and negligees?

A practical negligee for the woman who does not have time for the luxurious lacy boudoir gown is made from crepe in copen, rose, orchid, peach or wisteria, with sleeves and neck faced in white.

It is a simple slip-on model, being merely a long strip of material folded in two, with an opening for the neck. This is bound with bias binding, and the sides are also bound to form long draped sleeves. Slits are cut for a narrow girdle. But perhaps the most interesting note of this kimono is the embroidery in black and white yarn, in the shape of spoked wheels, here and there on the crepe.

A little more elaborate is another negligee of georgette crepe, lace and crepe de chine. This is appropriate for boudoir wear, and suitable for the Winter brides. There is a deep flounce of accordion-pleated crepe de chine with pointed scallops and sleeves and bodice of soft cream lace. Over this is an apron tunic of the georgette pointed in the front, and forming a long trailing mesh in the back.

Breakfast coats are still popular because they are so universally becoming and comfortable. The crepe de chine coats are lined with soft China silk, and interlined with lambs' wool for warmth. The outside is prettily quilted and is lengthened at the hips by a flounce of the same material. The neck is finished with revers nicely tailored.

MANAGING THE HOME AND GOING TO BUSINESS, TOO

By Loretta C. Lynch

An Acknowledged Expert in All Matters Appertaining to Household Management

"I AM a business woman with a responsible position. A widower with an eight-year-old boy has asked me to marry him. He is most comfortably fixed financially, and he wants me to give up my very hard-earned position to manage the home he will make for me. While I enjoy the prospects of the comforts of a real home (I now live in a hotel) I love the business world and I love the work I am doing. I am wondering if it is not possible to keep my position and run the home, too. I shall appreciate your opinion."

My dear lady, it depends. There are superhuman women who can do two things well, I have heard, but I have yet to meet face to face a woman who can hold down a responsible position in the business world and run a home successfully without help.

However, there are women who make a business of housekeeping and you might carefully select one of these. If you KNOW just what you want her to do you might take a little time and show her just what you want. Take her to the shops and introduce credit account for her, if that is to be preferred to cash arrangement. Write your menus. Do not forget that the little boy should have a nonday luncheon planned for his growing body.

Standing in the place of the boy's mother, you must remember that some of your time belongs ethically to that boy and that no servant can entirely take your place.

Think the matter over carefully before you make your decision, but if you do decide to keep your present position do not try to burn the candle at both ends.

URIC ACID Does NOT Cause Rheumatism!

Furthermore I claim that Uric Acid is a HARMLESS and NECESSARY product of the body, that it is found in the body of every one-hundred-per-cent well person, and that the above statement is true, positively, because you have proof, here, of different cases of Rheumatism, in your own neighborhood, and how it is now being successfully treated in all its different forms, by simply following my advanced scientific methods.

The writing of this unusual book is the result of my twenty years' study, experimentation and success in the treatment of all forms of RHEUMATISM, NEURITIS, SCIATICA, GOUT, ETC., no matter in what form or how severe. Read it carefully, although brief, and you will find one complete copy of the book absolutely free if you will send your address at once to me at 427 Calcraft Building, Toronto, Canada.

Sugars Are Leaders in Broad, Strong Market with Over 20 Issues at New Tops

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

We are having a fresh outburst of cheerfulness. Judge Gary set the example, and now every day brings exuberant statements from high and not-so-high alike. Secretary Mellon promises delightful Spring trade. Julius H. Barnes indicates that we are going to prosper regardless of either quarrelling or peace-making in Europe.

Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank and his right-hand man, Lee Otwell, are on their way to Cuba. Percy H. Johnston, president of the Chemical National Bank, and his friend, Coleman Du Pont, start for Cuba in a day or so. George F. Baker, Jr., has hied himself off to Jekyll Island. Charles H. Sabin, head of The Guaranty Trust Company, has gone to California, as also has Frank A. Vanderlip. And the ship which left this week for a sixty-six-day cruise in the Mediterranean carried more millionaires than sailors.

One of my employers used to say that things went better in his absence than when he was on the job. Maybe some of our financial bosses have discovered the same thing.

* * *

But how many enterprises of importance have ever been able to raise capital successfully by tarring loose an army of stock pedlars.

Frankly, not one comes into my mind at the moment. But I do have in my mind instance after instance where projects thus financed came to grief. Indeed, we have had several notable cases during the last few months.

Individuals or enterprises able to command scant credit have to pay dearly for funds, whether they raise them in Wall Street or by button-holing unsophisticated workers and others and gulling them with all sorts of figures and promises.

One of the weaknesses of the Durant structure, as I see it, is the methods being employed to raise the scores and scores of millions now being collected and put into bricks and mortar. When panicky times come, any large concern that has not powerful banking support usually finds itself in a bad way.

* * *

"New Haven Railroad insures 7,000 employes."

So says a newspaper headline. Will it now proceed to insure dividends for its long suffering stockholders?

* * *

In analyzing the careers of men who have gained conspicuous success in the business or financial world, I have noticed that a very large percentage of them made an unusual mark, or did something out of the ordinary very early in life.

Louis K. Liggett now head of the biggest drug business in the world, attracted attention as soon as he started as a salesman in Detroit when he was only fourteen.

A dry goods house gave him some samples of a material which was dead stock and out of style. The firm put this joke over because he was just a kid.

He went out unconcerned at the situation, believing that his opportunity had come. He threw the joke back on the firm by selling all they had and asked them to order more. He found an outlet for this apparently worthless merchandise right under their noses.

* * *

Almost every learned dissertation on this, that and the next problem confronting the country ends up with the declaration that greater enlightenment and education are needed to set matters right.

One man who is doing more than usual of this needed work is Francis H. Sisson, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. Mr. Sisson is both a sound economist and an effective speaker. He earned his living long enough outside of Wall Street to be able to take a detached view of Wall Street and all his works.

Last evening Mr. Sisson talked to a large gathering of Iowa editors. His theme was the oft quoted observation of Josh Billings, that "The trouble with the American people is not so much their ignorance as the tremendous number of things they know that ain't so."

Some of the popularly believed things that aint so, according to Mr. Sisson were that railroad stocks are watered; that the Federal Reserve Board was responsible for the deflation of commodity prices in 1920 and 1921; that the United States can maintain an isolated position in world affairs; that Wall Street dictates money or credit conditions; that capitalism is responsible for economic and social ills; that a high tariff assures any real protection to American labor; that flat credit or currency can add to the wealth of the nation; that the interest of any class or section can be permanently furthered at the expense of the general interest.

FRESH 1923 TOP FOR AMERICAN WOOLEN

Sugars were leaders in a broad, strong market, with over 20 issues at new highs, either for the year or since 1921. American Woolen lifted to a new top of 69¾.

Kresge jumped 5 points at 230, a 1923 high. Southern Railway, New York Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, both St. Paul issues, Northern Pacific, United Fruit, Crucible, Republic Steel and American Sumatra were among those at new highs.

All the sugar group advanced to fresh upside levels. American Beet Sugar was up more than 6 points. Cuban-American 2. Cuba-Cane Preferred 4. Manati over 8. South Porto Rico more than 2. Punta Alegre 2 and American Sugar around 2.

Opening prices were firm, early changes generally being small and unimportant. Southern Railway at once advanced to a new high record for the year and Marine Preferred opened a point higher. Good initial buying also was noted in the Sugars. Motors and some of the dividend paying rolls.

Sugar stocks touched their new high levels for the year on announcements of an increase in the price of Cuban raw sugars to 4 cents a pound, the highest since 1921.

Gains of a point or more also were recorded by Coca Cola, Corn Products, Crucible Steel and American Woolen.

STERLING JUMPS TO NEW YEAR'S HIGH

Active demand for sterling resulted in new 1923 high. At $4.68¾ rate was only ⅝ below the 1922 record, $4.68⅞, reached December 12, and was ¼ above the former 1923 high of $4.68¾, quoted previous Saturday. Marks made a new high on the record-breaking .00245c.

COTTON FUTURES PRICES ARE FIRM

New York cotton futures prices were firm on week-end. March was up 8 points at 27.30; May, up 14 points at 28.28; June, up 7 points at 27.91; and July, up 17 points at 27.79; October, 23.40; December, 23.15.

BUYS 530 MILES OF POWER PLANT CABLES

Aluminum Company of America has been awarded a contract for 530 miles of steel reinforced aluminum cables, totaling 1,800,000 pounds, for the Hatch Ketchy Moccasin Creek Power Plant project.

Extra Dividend

Mahoning Investment has declared regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 and extra of 50 cents, both payable March 1 to stock of record February 3.

Wall St. Gossip

AMERICAN Can has been talked of for 20 to 25 per cent. stock dividend, which would seem unlikely at this time, despite good earnings.

GENERAL Cigar has been under distribution by pool, according to market sharps.

HOLDERS of Chile Copper 7 per cent. bonds who convert on or before February 28, 1923, will be paid interest up to and including February 6 and will receive in addition 62½ cents cash dividend on shares through conversion.

O. P. VAN SWERINGEN denies seeking control of Ann Arbor.

TOBACCO Products Corporation has acquired John Finzer & Bro. Company of Detroit, one of the oldest tobacco companies in the United States. No issue of stock or other financing in connection with this transaction is contemplated REPUBLIC Iron & Steel current assets December 31 were $25,205,395 and current liabilities $5,648,624, giving working capital of $16,156,771, against $15,180,064 at end of 1921, and $25,593,878 December 31, 1920.

PRESIDENT BUDD of Great Northern says any attempt to separate Burlington from Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroad system would prove disastrous to transportation in Northwestern section of the country.

CLUETT, Peabody & Co., Inc., for 1922 shows net of $12.01 a share on $18,000,000 common, against $3.24 a share on 18,482,500 outstanding preferred in 1921.

HARVARD PLANS DEBATE WITH VASSAR

Three women choirs of Harvard women in mid semester held a torchlight parade in celebration of the announcement that the Harvard-Princeton debating team is to test its powers against the Freshmen debaters of Vassar College next month.

The event, unique in the annals of college history will occur at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., March 3, when three gallant freshies from Cambridge will argue with three pretty flappers from Vassar.

PAUL WHITEMAN.

Paul Whiteman and his world famous Palais Royal Orchestra direct from Broadway comes to Mechanics Hall tonight for a grand concert and dance. Every man in this organization is a trained artist and soloist on his own particular instrument and has been with Mr. Whiteman at the Palais Royal for over three years, during which time they have made hundreds of phonograph records and need no introduction to the many thousands of dance enthusiasts. The original orchestra coming to Boston is the same that has played twelve hundred and fifty-nine successive nights in New York city, and this trip is their first appearance as a whole outside the glare of the white lights.

CONGRESSMAN LEAVES FRIENDSHIP FAREWELL

Los Angeles, Feb. 10.—Life is made happy "only by friendships," wrote Captain Henry Z. Osborne, Congressman, in a "Friendship Farewell" letter a few days before his death at his home here, it was revealed today.

Capt. Osborne realized death was near when he wrote the letter asking his son, Sheriff B. Osborne, to see its contents were passed on to his friends to help in the completion of their "staunch friendship."

YELOWLEY SAYS GOOD WHISKEY IS SCARCE

Kansas City, Feb. 10.—Captain Yelowley, director of Federal prohibition agents, here today in connection with the enforcement in Missouri, declared there was little good whiskey to be bought in the country today. He said the greatest difficulty encountered was in the withdrawals of grain alcohol for medicinal and scientific purposes and he re-distilling of denaturized alcohol.

M. COUE DEPARTS, PLEASED AT VISIT

New York, Feb. 10.—"I have had a beautiful trip and am very happy and pleased over it." So said Emile Coue, chemist from Nancey, prior to boarding the Olympic, which was to take him back home today. Two last audiences, which overflowed the theatre at the Lexington Theatre, paid a high tribute. The surge of the crippled children and adults to touch his hand was pathetic.

SEIDEL PLAYS AS SOLOIST AT CONCERT

By ZOE FABER.

Toscha Seidel, Russian violinist, was soloist at the fourteenth symphony concert yesterday afternoon at Symphony Hall. Mr. Monteux arranged a program which opened with th. Chausson Symphony and followed that by the Ballantine "From the Garden of Hellas." The second half was devoted to the Mendelssohn Concerto in E minor for violin and orchestra, and the Turina "Danzas Fantasticas."

Of course, Mr. Seidel was the high point of interest. He is a violinist who creates and maintains interest from the time he takes his position on the stage. He plays exceedingly well with warm, beautiful tone that he can spin to a thread as fine as one lone sunbeam.

FOOD COSTS DOWN IN 16 CITIES

Washington, Feb. 10.—The retail cost of food in sixteen of nineteen representative cities of the United states decreased between December 15 and January 15, the Department of Labor announced today.

The decline in Denver was 4 per cent; in Peoria and St. Louis, 3 per cent; in Minneapolis and St. Paul, Salt Lake City, Scranton, Seattle and Washington, 2 per cent; Baltimore, Cleveland, Omaha and Providence, 1 per cent; Detroit and Portland and reported decreases of less than 1-10ths of 1 per cent. The other three of the nineteen cities showed increases, Little Rock and Manchester reporting advances of 1 per cent, and Chicago less than 1-10ths of 1 per cent.

CONCERT BY TECH MUSICAL CLUBS

By ZOE FABER.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology put its very best foot forward and ventured into the overcrowded concert field of Boston by girding up its loins and putting on a concert; this time in the musical clubs that Tech boasts—and that is the reason they were able to make the good showing they did.

For soloist, they chose Miss Marjorie Moody, soprano, who was recently heard in oratorio. Miss Moody, accompanied by William Ellis Weston, sang instead of the arranged "Bell Song" from "Lakme," the florid aria from "La Traviata."

New England Robbed of Coal to Supply Canada

Hauled by Privately Managed Railroads Twice as Far as Boston and Sold for a Great Deal Less

In Montreal, the largest city of Canada and the commercial heart of Canada, the newspapers announce this week that the city government was prepared to sell AMERICAN HARD COAL to the citizens of Montreal for $16 a ton, provided, however, that ONLY FIVE TONS would be allowed to each citizen.

Do the people of New England understand what this means? Do they understand that this coal is carried farther beyond Boston than the coal mines are from Boston, carried through the wilderness, a wilderness of snow and forests, clear up into Canada, and there sold for $16 a ton, when the same coal drawn half the distance to Boston is sold to the poor in small lots at a rate as high as $25 a ton?

By far the greatest part of the cost of coal is the railroad transportation. The mine owners do not pretend that it costs more than $6 a ton to mine the coal and to put it into cars and to charge a reasonable profit for it. The rest of the cost is railroad transportation. Now if it costs $16 to buy that coal and to drag it to Boston, what ought it cost to drag it to Montreal, and if they can give FIVE TONS of coal to each customer who demands it, what ought they be able to deliver to the American people of New England?

It seems that our railroads have assumed the reverse of the old saying that "charity begins at home." According to their present practice, charity begins abroad! And worse still, they have added another rule, that the less consideration a stranger shows you the more consideration you should show the stranger. Canada, though a good neighbor, a neighbor whom we respect and with whom we always want to be on friendly and just terms, nevertheless knows that charity begins at home, and practices the rule. Canada does not hesitate to put an embargo upon something that she has and wants to keep, even though the people of the United States are willing to pay more for it than the Canadians. But here is a case where the Canadians get our goods for less than we have to pay for them and get them when we cannot get them at any price.

Moreover, if the price which the railroads charge us for transporting the coal is a fair charge, then the Canadians at $16 a ton are getting coal for less than it costs, or we are being robbed in paying $16 and more a ton. Our privately managed railroads, which are responsible for this situation, can take their choice. They are either selling this coal to the people of Canada for less than it costs or they are robbing us. But worse still, they are not giving us the coal we need at any price.

Now the Canadians not only put an embargo upon things that we want when the Canadians want them and forbid them to be transported out of their country, but they also deliberately give preference to English goods over our goods. Even the leader of the new Progressive party, comprised of farmers from the prairie lands, who advocate reciprocity with the United States and are tinctured more with American sentiment than the people of any other part of Canada, in his opening speech in Parliament the other day, laying down the policy of the new party, declared in favor of giving a greater preference to British goods.

All this is the result of private management of our railroads. Do you suppose for a moment that if the national government operated our railroads that they would be sending coal to Canada to be sold there for less or even for the same price that coal is sold in America at a point HALF WAY to Canada? Do you suppose that the Canadians could get FIVE TONS of our hard coal at a time when we can't get half a ton, if our government operated our railroads?

New Jersey's Roads

Whether You Live in New Jersey or Not This Interests You

Copyright, 1923, Star Company

All over the United States this is the double problem: First, to get money to improve the roads.

Second, to make sure that the money goes into the roads and not into the pockets of a grafting road-building trust.

A little while ago the Hearst newspapers, which circulate in the State of New Jersey more than twice as many newspapers as are sold by any of the excellent New Jersey State papers, was urging the election of Governor Silzer on the Democratic ticket.

He and his running mate, Senator Edwards, were elected by big majorities, and now Governor Silzer, in fulfillment of his campaign promises, has turned his attention to the problem of good roads, one of the biggest and most important problems in the State of New Jersey. It interests every other State, and Governor Silzer's problems are the problems of honest officials and earnest citizens everywhere.

What Governor Silzer found when he took up the road problem is typical of conditions generally, in Kansas, where a new Governor is making the same fight, in Illinois, all over the country.

Governor Silzer found eighty million dollars ready to be spent for good roads in the next five years and a well organized ring of grafters, with special patents, for road building and special inside pull all ready to get for themselves as many of the people's eighty million dollars as possible.

Fortunately, Governor Silzer found also excellent backing and editorial support in the very best and ablest of New Jersey's newspapers.

The Newark Evening News four days ago declared the "State's $80,000,000 in danger."

Governor Silzer went at the thing in the right way. As a first step, he dismissed from office every member of the State Highway Commission. That knocked all the props from under the "Highway pirates."

In place of the eight men dismissed, the Governor announced that he would name three men, submitting their names to the Senate.

The question is, what will the Republican State Senators do? Will they back up the Governor in his effort to turn the people's money, one hundred cents on the dollar, into better highways to help the farmers, owners of automobiles and increasing the value of every acre of New Jersey land? Or will they side with the "road pirates"?

They might as well side with the Governor, for the people will side with him and he will win his fight anyhow.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

GOOD WORDS

By Bruno Lessing

"I GOT to make a speech at my club in a couple of weeks," writes a correspondent from a Middle Western town. "Please give me some good, big words to use. I want to make them sit up and take notice. About six will do."

Nothing could be easier or sweeter. Here are six good, big ones. You needn't return them: Alopecia, proschoranchista, mellotic, eleemosynary, sagenitic, crustalogical.

You can run them all into one sentence if you like, or use them separately. For instance, you can say, "The greatest sign of our times is the mellotic eleemosynary of the crustalogical." Or, "If we get into the European mess again we'll all have alopecia."

But, honestly, can you beat it? Can you imagine a sane person wanting to use long words to impress others? And what kind of an audience could be impressed by such words?

If you want to write or want to make a speech, I'll give you some great words to use: Truth, justice, love, faith, growth.

Digest these words thoroughly, learn all about them, make them your own and then give the world all the ideas you derive from them. It's the job of a life-time. Let the hypocrites and the fakers and the "bunks" have the long words.

Many Tongues in Paris

There are cafes and restaurants where it is even embarrassing to order in French. In a well-known "bar" of the Faubour Montmartre a dialect of Orient is the official language. Just across the street from this little restaurant, which calls itself "The Algeria," you will find the rendezvous of Israelites from Constantinople. In another one the knowledge of Italian is necessary, and in many others Spanish is spoken fluently.

The actual number of foreigners in Paris has not been officially calculated since 1917, when the figures given out was 294,434. Since that date the number has certainly been sensibly increased.

Use Trucks

Editor Boston American:

Your exposure of the coal situation certainly ought to wake the people up. Everything you say is true. On December 17, I was in Delanson, N. Y., and there were many cars filled with hard coal. In November I have seen the same in Mechanicsville and Oneonta, N. Y. I also visited Carbondale, Pittston, Scranton, etc., where I found that the anthracite miners were only working half time which proves that there is no shortage of hard coal. The coal found in Mechanicsville and Rotterdam Junction would eventually all have found its way into Canada only for your exposure. It's easy enough to change the bills of destination which is a "safety first" device. The Boston American is doing us a great service, but there is something more I would like to see it do: On July 1 when we were facing a railroad strike the Chamber of Commerce all over bragged about how many auto trucks they could commandeer into service, so the public should not suffer. President Harding would put the army trucks into service, etc. Where are those trucks now? The public is suffering. There is coal on sidings all over, but no engines to get it here. Those trucks would come in handy now. After all, it looks as if the cry of "help the public," on July 1 by the Chamber of Commerce was but a "blind" to fool the public. Those trucks were to be used to break the strike, to help the railroad magnates destroy the unions. In conclusion, let me say: There is plenty of coal, but no engines to haul it. Can the Boston American arouse public opinion and force out those trucks so we can get that coal? I think it can do it.

THE HELPING HAND

Do Not Inclose Stamps. Letters Will Not Be Answered Personally

Needs Clothes and Work

Editor Helping Hand:

I would be very glad to have the clothes offered by Mrs. M. A. H. I need them badly, as I have five small children and a sick husband. I would be very grateful for them. I would also like to get three days' work a week.

MRS. J. F. S.

Needs Sled for Coal

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a young mother of three small children. My husband got a job only last week after being out of work a long time. We have no coal, and every time we need coal I have to go down to the coal company and get 100 pounds. Is there any kind person who has a sled to spare with which to get this coal, as I am not strong enough to carry the 100-pound bag all the way home.

MRS. C. N.

ED. NOTE—Some of the coal profiteers should be made to cough up for a few sleds for women like Mrs. C. N.

More Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I see in tonight's Boston American that a Mrs. M. A. H. has a bundle of clothes to give. I wish I could get them, as I am badly in need of clothes for my two little girls. If they don't get some clothing soon they will have to go naked, as their clothes are all in rags. They have so few that I wash what little they have every night so they will be clean for the morning. I am willing to do some work in return for the clothes.

MRS. M. M.

ED. NOTE—The clothes offered by Mrs. M. A. H. have been given to another needy family. You do not give the ages of your two girls, so that it is impossible to select clothes for them from among the things offered. Please write again and give their ages or the sizes needed, and probably there will be generous readers to help you.

Braided Mats

Editor Helping Hand:

I know a woman in this town who makes lovely old-fashioned braided mats. She needs money and would be glad to have some orders. She will furnish the material or will make them up from material furnished.

MRS. N. S. B.

ED. NOTE—The names of several who have requested braided mats will be sent you.

Care of Children

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a home and small salary to offer to some dear old lady for keeping my children while I work.

Stove 100 Years Old in Service

LEWISTON, Pa., Feb. 10.—A stove which bears a date of more than 100 years ago and which has been in continuous use during the entire century is still doing duty for David Hammann, a nearby farmer.

Although the firm which made the stove has long since gone out of business, Hammann went to considerable trouble to trace its history. It was first bought by a man named Shingler, who sold it to another family named Lauver. Hammann bought the stove from Lauver forty-six years ago, and in that time has never spent a cent on it for repairs.

LIVING COSTS RISE AND FALL AT THE POLLS

By Herbert Kaufman

JASON went to the Hesperides to find the golden fleece.

The American Woolen Company and associate tariff pets went to Washington..

Forty-five per cent. wool duty means at least five dollars advance on each medium grade man's suit and overcoat bought in the next two years.

"That famous outfit at ten dollars," so dear—and cheap—to recent memory will shortly cost from thirty-five to forty.

We begin to realize the result of changing Congress into a rotary club, where every little interest has a watchdog of its own.

A Big Public Watchdog

The average farmer and his family won't be much of a tariff beneficiary, according to Jesse Straus, president of the National Drygoods Association.

Mr. Straus is in a position to obtain very accurate information on the subject. His association is probably the greatest distributing organization on earth.

Its two thousand members employ four hundred thousand people and purchase two and a quarter billion dollars' worth of merchandise yearly.

Expert analysis and opinion from forty-eight States is magna-voxed when he predicts "increased prices of manufactured product disproportionate to any increase in the prices of agricultural products."

Storekeepers from all over the country, now comparing notes in New York, protest that "a comparatively small group of manufacturers, without regard for common prosperity," are the main beneficiaries of the Fordney-McCumber bill.

Smashing Some More Furniture

Thirty thousand garment workers have quit their machines. Among other grievances, they complain that their employers refuse to permit an examination of balance sheets.

Losses resulting from this strike, as from all suspensions of production, will immediately be charged in the overhead and marked on the price ticket. The consumer always pays for the furniture capital and labor smash.

Public interest does not seem to concern the dress and suit trade any more than it bothers mine owners or workers.

Caroline Ribout's Collapsible Hat

For generations women have found it impossible to carry an extra hat about except in a container or a trunk.

She probably sat down and wondered "what stunts haven't been done yet in millinery. What are the objections to present hats? What advantages can be added to them?" Or perhaps a customer suggested, "I'd like to take another bonnet along. Can't you design one to slip in a suitcase? I'm making a quick trip and don't want to be burdened with a bandbox."

This Miracle Shop of Ours

The first men to make sails and wheels and pots and looms, and their descendants who puddled steel and designed cogs and created dynamos, also began to achieve notably through wondering how things could be done better.

They whetted imagination on possibility and sought and wrought until this earth changed from a raw rough chunk of star dust into the miracle shop from which we now leisurely and comfortably satisfy all requirements.

You don't pause sufficiently to ponder why you are not still a mangy beast, leaping from tree to tree, groping about marshes and prowling jungles, entirely dependent upon the careless mercies of nature for sustenance and shelter.

If you realized oftener what an interminable procession of efforts preceded the civilization to which you were born, your own empty, undistinguished career might spur you to a use of that cuckoo's nest of inherited ideas you call a brain.

Until you in turn design a tool or improve a method, or do something that a million available substitutes can't as easily accomplish, your time will be bought and sold at the reigning market price of mediocrity.
